School bus catches fire No one injured

BY HEATHER MICHON

The school year got off to a dramatic start as a Fluvanna County school bus caught fire near the junction of Route 15 and Union Mills Road Thursday (Aug. 9) at around 8 a.m. Everyone walked away uninjured.

Fluvanna County Public Schools Superintendent Chuck Winkler said in an email that there were 34 children, aged 5-8, aboard the #9 bus at the time of the fire.

Driver Terry Carter immediately evacuated the children and led them to the safety of the road shoulder, some distance from the bus.

According to a press release from the Fluvanna County Sheriff's Office (FCSO), the emergency call was received at around 7:48 a.m. Palmyra Fire Co. #1 and FCSO deputies arrived within minutes. Route 15 was briefly closed to traffic while the crews worked to extinguish the blaze.

The children were placed on another vehicle and taken away from the scene. "All 34 arrived [at] Central [Elementary] at 8:25, safe and sound," said Winkler.

"Mr. Carter, along with a few other community members on the scene, did an outstanding job," he added. "I am sincerely grateful that they were there to help our children." He was also thankful for the assistance of first responders and law enforcement.

The cause of the fire is now under investigation.

Virginia Price said on social media

Thursday that she noticed the strong smell of fuel as she was putting her second-grader on the bus near Troy at around 7:30 a.m. She also noticed a puddle of fluid as the bus pulled away.

She was sufficiently worried to call the school transportation department at around 7:35 a.m. to tell them what she had seen. In a text, she said they had told her they would pass the information along.

Moments later, she saw the first social media posts about a school bus on fire. "My heart dropped," she said. "I just had that gut feeling it was my son's bus."

Around this time, her daughter's bus pulled up, and the driver confirmed the news. She assured Price that all the children on the bus were safe.

On social media, a former school bus driver named Wendy Mayo said buses are inspected by their drivers before each route, but as with any vehicle, things can just break without warning.

"I can only even imagine what is going through the bus driver's mind," she said. "When we had our training, we had our bus filled with dummies and smoke and were trained on how to handle situations like that, getting them off in a timely manner...and even knowing it was practice, it was scary."

Anyone with information on the fire is asked to call Capt. Von Hill at the Fluvanna County Sheriff's Office at 434-589-8211.

Defending our profession

CARLOS SANTOS, PUBLISHER

Last week the Fluvanna Review published a story on a proposed 4 percent meals tax. We also published a story on school lunch debts, local karate athletes heading to Brazil and about the new school staff. None of it's fake news.

The stories are about life in Fluvanna County. We work hard to cover news in the county every week and cringe when we get anything wrong. We work hard to stay unbiased, to report fairly, to paint the most accurate picture we can of any event, crime or government action. We have no agenda but to report the news as truthfully as we can.

So, we join newspapers from across the country who this week are using their editorial pages to defend our profession against President Trump's unfair criticism of the media.

Politics aside, we believe the president's sweeping, wrong-headed attacks on the free press hurt our country and every citizen in it.

In Fargo, N.D., at a June 27 rally, the president taunted the media a number of times, encouraging jeers from the audience. At a recent rally in Pennsylvania, he pointed at reporters and called them "horrible, horrendous people."

"They can make anything bad, because they are fake, fake disgusting news," he said. We've lost count of the number of times the president has used the term fake news – a term he often reserves only for news that makes him look bad.

Though his criticism is aimed at the national media, the unfair characterizations filter down to the smaller daily and weekly papers. He's the president after all. He leads the country and to a degree informs our American culture.

Our job at its core is to give our readers the rough draft of Fluvanna County's history – good and bad – every week. We take that job seriously.

We are not the enemy of the people. Untruths are the enemy of the people. The media, despite its faults, is one of our pillars of democracy.

We understand that at times we in the media deserve criticism. Send your letters to the editor and we publish that criticism. Now, try criticizing a president who has a state-run media. Let me know how that goes.

Cockburn will provide effective representation

Leslie Cockburn, Democratic candidate for Congress in Virginia's 5th District, came to the Senior Statesmen Candidate Forum at the Senior Center in Charlottesville on Wednesday to explain her positions on issues that matter to citizens in the 5th. The Republican nominee, although invited, didn't show.

Citizens are entitled to have any candidate asking for their votes explain how he or she plans to make their lives better. It was clear from Leslie Cockburn's discussion of the many issues raised by the audience that Leslie believes this. The elusive Republican candidate? Apparently not. It also was clear that Leslie has talked to citizens throughout the 5th about what their priorities are and that she has thoughtfully considered how to achieve those priorities. The Republican candidate? Again, no way to know.

So what are Leslie's positions on issues that matter?

- Medicare for all, including financing it with thoughtful approaches to addressing America's medical system's inefficiencies and reprioritizing federal spending, such as by ending endless wars in the Middle East;
- Protecting the environment, such as by not building gas pipelines that are not necessary and carry excessive risk to the 5th's agriculture industries and beautiful countryside;
- Encourage industries that provide high paying and rewarding jobs, such as those in solar power, to locate here; and
- Free community college education, not just as a stepping stone to a four-year bachelor's degree, but also for job training for 21st century jobs that don't require such a degree.

Leslie made clear that she values the views of the 5th's citizens about what Congress' priorities should be. Leslie also made clear that she views these interchanges with the 5th's citizens not just as an election exercise, but as a continuing part of a Member of Congress' job. She has said along that line, as a Member of Congress, her door will always be open, and she will hold four town halls in her first year.

In November, vote for Leslie Cockburn for Congress to secure effective representation for the people of the 5th District.

Is this America?

This letter is in response to one in last week's edition titled "We have been warned about Trump."

Julius Neelley was accurate in his description in last week's Fluvanna Review warning of the fascist tendencies of Donald Trump. Perhaps even more alarming is the willingness of many Republicans in Congress to follow the tweets of their would-be demigod. Following are examples:

1. While overt racism has dramatically lessened over the past 40 years, Republicans reverse this by largely ignoring Trump's racist ranting and allowing it to infect our laws and policies.

2. The Republican Party throughout the 20th century was a party of fiscal responsibility, yet it has followed Trump with his vaunted tax cut and ballooning federal debt, creating a deeper chasm separating the rich and everybody else.

3. The Republican Party goes meekly along with Trump as he ignores science in general and specifically the effects of global warming. They seem oblivious to rising oceans and the destructive potential of climate change

4. Continuing with heads buried in sand, the Republican Party has propped up the declining fossil fuel industry, allowing our competitors – most notably the Chinese – to outdistance us in the production of clean energy, which is clearly essential for our future.

5. It has reduced funding and eliminated regulations that have prevented the contamination of our air and water.

6. It continues to undermine the Affordable Care Act, doing its best to take away the health care that the ACA provides for millions of Americans.

7. It has nullified the hallowed promise of America as a refuge for the downtrodden.

8. Perhaps worst of all, the party has afflicted us with a president who could not do more damage to our alliances and democratic institutions if he were the agent of an enemy government. A free press, justice and law enforcement, free and fair elections – these have all suffered. All our partnerships are undermined.

Is this America? Is this to be the guiding spirit of our civilization? We must not accept this for our grandchildren! While we cannot vote Trump out of office until 2020, we can change the composition of Congress in November of this year. Here in Fluvanna we can do our part by voting for two solid Democrats – Tim Kaine for Senate and Leslie Cockburn for Congress. It's a beginning.

Firestorm lit at School Board meeting

BY RUTHANN CARR, CORRESPONDENT

What appeared to be the close of a normal School Board meeting Wednesday (Aug. 8) turned into anything but.

Shirley Stewart (Rivanna) took issue with how Chair Perrie Johnson (Fork Union) greeted school staff at a breakfast Aug. 2, so she proposed the following motion:

"I would like to make the following motion that we inform staff that the message from the chair on opening day was not spoken on behalf of the Board. Therefore, the Board directs the superintendent to draft a statement that represents the mission, beliefs and strategic priorities that have previously been approved by the Board to be shared with staff."

And that lit a firestorm.

This is what Johnson said to the staff on Aug. 2: "I'll take just a minute to say one quick thing, and of course, it's 'thank you.' Thank you for your work with our kids – whatever that work is – and thank you for choosing Fluvanna. I worked with Fluvanna for 25 years as a teacher and I quit. Then I got on the School Board to try and change some of the things that made me want to quit. Which brings me to – you are my heroes. You're here now. Thank you and have a great year."

After Stewart read her motion Johnson said, "Bringing this up before the Board you're embarrassing me very much. I was welcoming the staff at a staff event. I thanked them for working for Fluvanna. That was my motivation."

Brenda Pace (Palmyra), who was not at the Aug. 2 event, said, "From what I heard it was a negative message. I'm expecting good things for the staff and school."

Andrew Pullen (Columbia) who also was not at staff opening day, said when he heard about what Johnson said, he called a few teachers to get their reaction.

"Until I brought it up nobody made a big deal of it," Pullen said. "I didn't take it negatively. I'm here making changes and we're moving in the right direction."

Then Pace spoke for a few minutes about how she'd been on the Board for nearly eight years and she didn't think this Board worked together. Pace said she took offense to Johnson having said she was elected to make changes.

"We were all elected," Pace said.

"I don't feel like I'm on a Board. I don't feel we can move forward in a positive manner. ...I've been sitting on the back burner for a while and I don't feel as if I'm working on a Board, if you want to put it out there, I'll put it out there."

When Johnson called for a vote on the motion, Stewart and Pace voted for; Johnson and Pullen voted against. Rittenhouse was not at the meeting. Because the vote ended in a tie, the motion will be brought up again at the Sept. 12 meeting.

After the vote during the last public comment period, Carolyn Ley stormed to the podium.

"I'm stunned. What in the world did I just witness? Trying to muzzle an elected official? Trying to limit speech? If you go to court you'll lose I'm sure," Ley's voice was cracking, filled with emotion.

"This is ridiculous. What I see here is pettiness. I'm sorry we elected you. ... Disagree? Great. Don't muzzle."

Ley went back to where she sat in the back of the room with her phone on a tripod. She said she was trying to stream the meeting live on Facebook because she wanted it to be accessible to people who couldn't come in person.

"It didn't work very well," she said.

Earlier in the year the Board asked Superintendent Chuck Winkler to look into recording the meetings so people can access them online like the county does the Board of Supervisors meetings.

Winkler provided several options and the Board chose the one where the meetings were recorded but not made accessible on the web. Winkler said the school attorney advised against putting the recordings on the web because it made the school vulnerable to lawsuits because of ADA compliance issues. The July 31 seminar was recorded as was the Wednesday (Aug. 8) meeting. As it stands now, if someone wants access to the recording they must make a Freedom of Information Act request. Winkler estimated it would cost about $75 to make a CD to honor the request.

Also during the meeting, the Board discussed the 2017-18 $40,000 cafeteria debt. Winkler said after the Fluvanna Review article on it came out, he started receiving checks to pay off the debt. He didn't say if the checks were from donations or from those who owed money, but the amount is now down to $33,000.

A new law went into effect July 31 preventing schools from making a student who doesn't have lunch money do chores, giving the student a sandwich in lieu of the meal, or singling out the student in any way.

Winkler assured the Board Fluvanna doesn't do any of those things.

The Board suggested they set an amount a person must owe before it goes to a lawyer for collection. Winkler said he'd do more research and bring it back to the Board for a vote.

Another vote that ended in a tie and will be brought up at the next meeting was whether to change the number of years a teacher would work before getting tenure. Right now in Fluvanna it's five years. For a long time it had been three years. The Board discussed the pros and cons of each.

Johnson said she would prefer it be three.

"It's a disservice to students to let a teacher go another two years after we saw they weren't doing well," she said. "If we cap it at three we just saved some students a lot of trouble."

Stewart said she appreciated both sides. "At the beginning of their career they have a lot to learn and it can take five years," she said.

Winkler said a lot more documentation must be done to dismiss a tenured teacher. He advocated five years before a teacher is given a continuing contract.

Stewart and Pace voted to keep it five years; Johnson and Pullen voted to make it three.

Where does the Board go from here?

After the Aug. 8 meeting, the Fluvanna Review asked Perrie Johnson and Shirley Stewart, "Where does the Board go from here? What would you like to see happen?"

Stewart: "With two new members this year, we are a relatively new Board. I realize that there may be times when we need to step back to examine how we work together so that we can perform at our highest level. Specifically, as a part of this process, I would like for the Board to discuss each of our roles and responsibilities so that there is a clear understanding."

Johnson (who stressed her comment is not to be construed as coming from the Board): "I have a very hard time accepting that my remarks thanking teachers and staff are at the root of what we need to address as a Board at this point. I'd like to see us identify any deeper conflicts and work together to overcome them."

The Review also asked, "What did you expect on the Board and what do you feel is your role?"

Stewart: "My experiences in other school districts, as a parent, teacher and administrator, shape my perspective. I understand that I am one voice of many and that the richness of our discussions is based on our varied perspectives. It is our job to promote the mission, vision and strategic priorities that have been established for the benefit of our students, staff and community. It is my hope that by serving on the Board, I can contribute to enriching the learning opportunities available to Fluvanna's children."

Johnson: "When I was elected to the Board, I expected to focus on the needs of students and how we can improve public education in Fluvanna. I feel my individual role, generally, is to ensure our limited resources are used efficiently to provide the very highest quality education for Fluvanna's students. My role, more specifically, is to bring a teacher's perspective to that process. As for my role as chair, I organize the business side of the Board and preside over meetings. I try to encourage a healthy balance of individual points of view and Board consensus."

Homeless, hopeless, suicidal

CONTRIBUTED BY GEORGE GORMAN
PASTOR OF PALMYRA AND HADEN CHAPEL
UNITED METHODIST CHURCHES

story is relived over and over again. But something or someone, maybe God, told me I couldn't do that. So I breathed in another sigh, and I went into Walmart and bought a tent and some camping supplies and put the three of them up in a paid campground. Mind you, we were now in the heat and humidity of summer.

This wonderful lady in one of my churches stepped up to the plate to help me, sort of as Doris' advocate.

So two campgrounds later, as Doris was found on her knees by her advocate, coughing and struggling to breathe with lung impairment, I took another sigh and moved Doris and her two babies into the basement of the parsonage, where there is a bedroom and a bathroom. We bought her a little refrigerator and microwave. I thought to myself, "Just what have I got myself into, but I just can't let her go back homeless on the road. I can't." By the way, before I forget, if you want to know what physical and mental stress does to you, know that Doris was not 80 but 59. I cringe at the stories she told me about her abuse. I thought to myself, "There is a special corner in hell for men like that."

So we desperately needed something bigger than a bedroom. Fortunately, a church member approached me and for a small rent offered the lower space of a house temporarily, with a bedroom, living room, bathroom, but no kitchen. It was not ideal but was better than a car.

Now it is some two years later and Doris is still in the same place and we are looking for something else with a small kitchen. Meanwhile she now looks her 61 years and once again hope has started to creep in and the "Thelma and Louise suicide pact" has gone to a back burner. I have to tell you, this is the most difficult and heart-wrenching thing that I have had to deal with in my 18 years of pastoral ministry and I need help. Doris needs help. Archie and Peanut need help!

So readers, please finish this article and listen to my plea, my crazy idea. You be the judge. I thought maybe someone in Fluvanna, Albemarle County or neighboring counties, might have a broken but fixable unused 400- or maybe 500-square foot building or a trailer on their country property with electricity and a bathroom. We know that Doris can't really afford any of this and will not under any circumstances give up her

It's 7 p.m. on a Sunday evening and I hadn't eaten since breakfast. So I decided to head on home but I paused and told myself, "Better check to see if there are any messages on the landline." I only remember to check it now and then, as I depend on my cell phone. Sure enough, there were several messages and I began scrolling through. I pulled out a piece of paper and a pen as this very soft voice came across the line and kindly asked for a place to stay for herself and her two little dogs, for just one night. She left a number. After a big sigh, I called her.

I drove the almost 10 miles to Zion Crossroads and parked my car at Sheetz. It looked like her car as described, so I approached and saw the two little dogs. There in the driver's seat was this little old lady, who was probably in her eighth decade of living. And I thought to myself, how could an 80-year-old lady be homeless? That's immoral!

She told me her name was Doris and her Boston terrier was Archie and the other, what I call a three-pound "bad hair day dog" was Peanut. I secured a room at the pet-friendly Best Western and asked Doris if she needed any food. She said no, just a room where she could bath her "babies" and herself and "all three of us" can rest in the bed. I didn't believe her, so I got some food from IHOP and she readily accepted it.

Subsequent conversation revealed that Doris had been badly physically and emotionally abused, and therefore scarred, by a husband. She was left alone with little money and paid the rent by taking care of her elderly landlady's pet dog. But when Elaine, the landlady, died, Doris had no way to pay for the rent and was evicted. So she had lived on the road homeless with Archie and Peanut for six months, sleeping and eating what she could in her car, and sometimes in a campground. Her primary concern was her two babies, and Archie and Peanut loved her dearly. Little three-pound Peanut bravely protected his "mama."

I guess I should have just given her a little money and left, because this same

Obituary

Mary Anne Konski Avers (Nancy)

Nancy Avers, of Palmyra, Va., died on Aug. 9, 2018, at the Hospice of the Piedmont Center for Acute Hospice Care in Charlottesville from complications of pancreatic cancer. She was born in Baltimore, Md., on June 5, 1942, to the late Stanley Louis Konski and Gladys Reeves Konski. Nancy is survived by her husband, Carl Dennison (Denny) Avers, her guardian angel and the love of her life; a cherished and devoted daughter, Sherry Ann Sparrow; her son-in-law William McSweeney; and her loving sister-in-law Margaret (Peggy) Boisvert Konski, widow of her late brother S. Joseph Konski.

She moved to Washington, D.C., in 1961. Her career was in commissioned furniture sales at Woodward & Lothrop and Bloomingdales where she met her husband-to-be Denny. Married since 1981, they enjoyed a wonderful life together. Nancy and Denny traveled the world. Each year, she and her daughter Sherry would venture off on a Mother's Day trip, seeing the sights of America and going to concerts.

After leaving Woodies, she and her daughter operated a hair salon and consignment shop in Annandale, Va. For three years prior to moving to Lake Monticello in 2002, she was a civilian coordinator for the United States Marine Corp Reserve Toys for Tots program based in Quantico, Va. Nancy was an associate member of United Daughters of the Confederacy, Scottsville Chapter, where she held the position of poetry chairman. She was also a former member of The National Society Colonial Dames XVII Century, House of Burgesses Chapter, and National Society Daughters of the American Colonists, Colonel Joshua Fry Chapter, where she was one of the founding members.

The family wishes to extend their gratitude to the superb and caring doctors and staff at the University of Virginia Medical Center and the Hospice of the Piedmont. Nancy was especially grateful for the never ending support and prayers of dear friends; and the inspiration of Pastors Ken Albright and Paul St. Clair of Grace and Glory Lutheran Church, where a celebration of life service will be held on Thursday, Aug. 16.

On Saturday, Aug. 18, services will be held at Trinity Lutheran Church, 76 N. Davis Street, Keyser, W.Va., with Pastor Sally Bartling officiating. Interment will follow at Queens Point Cemetery, Keyser, where Nancy will be buried near Denny's parents.

In lieu of flowers, please consider memorial donations to Grace and Glory Lutheran Church, 683 Thomas Jefferson Parkway, Palmyra, Va., 22963.

Fluco football readies for new season

BY DUNCAN NIXON, CORRESPONDENT

New Fluco football coach Mike Morris is busily preparing the team for the 2018 season. The team scrimmaged Aug. 8 at Waynesboro and will scrimmage at home Aug. 17 at 6 p.m. against Warren County. The regular season opens with a long trip down south to take on Blue-stone High Aug. 24. The Fluco home opener will be Aug. 31, when they will host Spotsylvania High.

Morris said that his team has been working hard and that he hopes to run an offense that emphasizes ball control. However, he does expect to use a variety of open sets that will force the opposition "to defend the entire field." Coach Joel Gray will be Morris' offensive coordinator.

Morris will be his own defensive coordinator and he expects to utilize a basic 4-4 formation, with multiple fronts and adjustments as necessary. While the Fluco football team has not been terribly successful of late, there is reason for some optimism this season. Morris coached the Fluco JV squad to a 6-4 record last season and key players from last year's varsity squad are returning. Morris said that he has an impressive 80 athletes out this year for the varsity, JV and eighth grade teams.

On offense, Morris expects to have a host of running backs carrying the load of a ball control offense. He mentioned Prohett Harris, Austin Craig, Nathan Smith, Daori Green and John McDaniel as ball carriers. At quarterback, there are apparently still a number of possibilities, but he mentioned juniors Justin Sullivan and Cameron Holland as the leading prospects.

The Flucos may be stronger than in the recent past on the offensive and defensive lines. Three linemen who Morris mentioned as two-way players were Matt Waller, Caleb Stoltz and Walt Stribling. Stribling was second team All-District last year as a sophomore. Morris also commented that he expects Alden Custer to man the center position on the offensive line. Another two-way player that will contribute is Joey Van Dyke who is a tight end on offence and a defensive end.

Morris mentioned a group of four linebackers from whom he expects leadership and intelligent play: Malachi Hall, Nathan Smith, Towler Westcoat and Leukas Koczan. The defensive backfield will probably include several of the running backs. Harris was All-District first team last season at defensive back. Also in the defensive backfield expect to see Juwuan Gray, Djwan Anderson and wide receiver Colby Martin. The kicking game was not settled at the time of this article, but Morris noted that soccer player Elijah Bullock appears to be a strong prospect.

Senior lineman Matt Waller is in his second varsity season, and expects to play offensive guard and defensive tackle. He commented that he thinks that the team is really getting the new offense down and that he is looking forward to getting the season under way. Senior wide receiver and safety Colby Martin is also in his second varsity season. He commented that practices have been going smoothly and he believes that the team is really starting to click.

Morris noted that he has a large number of talented assistants, with a total of 14 assisting him on the varsity, JV and eighth grade teams. The Flucos have a schedule this year that hopefully will allow a young team to develop and improve as the season progresses. They play three regular season games and have a bye before taking on the tough Jefferson District part of their schedule. The first game against a Jefferson District opponent is not until Sept. 21, when they host Monticello High.

Couple shares lessons from living in Poland

BY PAGE H. GIFFORD
CORRESPONDENT

Allan and Sue Mink sit on the main square with St. Mary's in the background.

Poland may not top the list of must-see travel destinations, but Allan and Susan Mink came home with many stories to tell after living there three months.

"It is a beautiful city, clean, very safe, many speak English, and it is not discovered by tourists," Sue Mink said. She couldn't stop raving about the food, including the duck breast with sour cherry sauce. Poland has a lot of bang for the buck in that it is very inexpensive, she said. The only drawback is the cold temperatures in the winter, including snow by November. Many people heat with coal, so during the winter there's lots of pollution in the city. She added that spring, summer and early fall are great times to visit.

Passionate about history, Sue Mink explained Krakow's rich and varied past with its prosperity and its struggles. Krakow is the second largest city in Poland, and one of the oldest in Europe. Situated on the banks of the Vistula River, it's home to a little over 750,000 people. It began as a settlement on the current site of Wawel castle, where a legendary fierce fire-breathing dragon lived. In 1038 it became the seat of the Polish government and was one of the most important trade centers in Europe. Although it was attacked and burned by the Mongols, the city rebuilt and regained its splendor and importance.

"In 1364, King Casimir founded the University, which still operates. He also founded the Jewish suburb Kazimierz, where we nested," Sue Mink said. The 15th and 16th centuries were Krakow's Golden Age, in which the city was a center of culture, art and commerce.

"Some of my favorite places in Krakow were the salt mines," she said. The Wieliczka salt mines are a historic monument located in the Krakow metro area and feature a legend about a Hungarian princess and a history that includes the Soviet disruption of a Nazi arms factory. Beginning in the 13th century it was mined for table salt, but ceased commercial mining in 1996 due to market decline. Deep in the mine is the brightly lit St. Kinga's Chapel with a statue of St. Barbara, Da Vinci's The Last Supper and Pope John Paul II all carved out of salt.

"I loved the Franciscan church because the stained glass was breathtaking, as were the art nouveau paintings all over the walls. It was the pope's favorite church, and I loved to just go sit and look in it," she said. The stained glass windows are large and the art nouveau style gives it a more modern flavor – less traditional but beautifully dynamic. "Also I just loved the main square – a great place for people watching and there were often fairs and events there."

In 1572, after the death of King Sigismund II, who had no heirs, the conflict among the nobles weakened the central government and the throne went first to France and then to other foreign governments. After more upheaval, a brutal invasion by the Swedes and an outbreak of the Bubonic plague, the capital of Poland was moved to Warsaw.

Eventually Poland was conquered and divided between three countries – Austria, Germany and Russia. Krakow fell into the Austrian section and became part of the Hapsburg Empire. Although it thrived culturally under Austrian rule, the people of Poland longed to be reunited under one rule.

In 1939, Nazi Germany invaded Poland during the infamous blitzkrieg and Krakow fell that September.

“The Jews were moved to a ghetto south of the city and streets and landmarks were renamed with German names. Eventually, nearly all the Jews of Krakow were murdered, many in Auschwitz,” Sue Mink said. About 3,000 survived, a third of them saved due to the efforts of Oscar Schindler of the famed Schindler’s List, and his enamelware factory just south of the city. Though the inhabitants of Krakow suffered during the war, the city itself was left unscathed. “If travelers can deal with it, they should go to Auschwitz as it’s not that far, the Rynek Underground Museum in the main square - it’s an architectural site that shows the old market square as it was in medieval times. Schindler’s factory is also there.”

Soviet forces entered the city in January 1945 and the country was under Soviet rule until 1989.

“During that time, a large suburb, Nowa Huta, was built around a huge steel mill to the east of the city. An entirely planned area, it was meant to be a prototype of the perfect socialist city,” she said. “It was interesting to see the bits left from the Communist era, including little restaurants called Milk Bars that were very cheap, set up for the workers - for example, 40 cents for breakfast.”

“We visited Lviv, which is in Ukraine. The best thing that happened was when we were going there, we had to change trains because the tracks are different gauges between Poland and Ukraine. We got confused and missed the train to Lviv, and it only went once a day, so we were stuck in this tiny Polish border town overnight. But there was a magnificent castle, and we actually were able to spend the night there at Krasiczyn Castle,” she said. “Lviv is a grand old lady but she’s not recovered from the Communist era yet - still scruffy, but with great beauty underneath. Also even less expensive than Krakow.

“I think Krakow will be discovered soon as a great place to visit,” she continued. “People should get there before it’s found out. Wonderful architecture - some of it very eclectic and fun, like the house of architect and painter, Teodor Talowski. This was his personal home. It has a spider web in the circle on the top of the building, along with a turkey and a dragon on either side. He had a number of really fun buildings throughout Krakow.” He has been described as combining the influences of historicism, art nouveau and modernism in his eclectic style.

Sue Mink said Krakow is booming with over 50 international companies, including IBM, Google and Cisco.

“Krakow is seen by many as the European version of Silicon Valley, and the unemployment rate is about 4 percent,” she said. The city is a center of culture and education and, as the Minks discovered, a growing tourist destination.

A large and enthusiastic group of citizens joined Fluvanna County and the Fluvanna Historical Society in dedicating the Fluvanna Farm Heritage Museum Saturday (Aug. 4). This newest addition to the museum complex at the center of Pleasant Grove Park is an attractive barn-like structure designed to house a museum honoring Fluvanna’s farming history.

The museum was a joint project between the local government and the historical society. The museum will house a collection of antique farm equipment donated by local farmer, John May, and his family. May and others were instrumental many years ago in convincing the historical society and the county to hold an annual celebration of Fluvanna’s rural past, an event that ultimately became Old Farm Day.

The new museum structure was completed a few weeks before its dedication. It is designed to blend in with the other traditional structures in the center of Pleasant Grove.

The museum was built with money initially provided by Fluvanna County and subsequently by the Fluvanna Historical Society. The project cost slightly over $300,000, of which the society provided $272,000. For many years, 50 percent of the net proceeds from Old Farm Day were dedicated to the farm museum. This is a prime example of the kind of public-private partnership which has been used for so many of the amenities at Pleasant Grove. These include the Heritage Trail, the restoration of the Pleasant Grove House and its summer kitchen, the design and construction of modern restroom facilities near the Pleasant Grove House and the picnic shelters at the Eastern Trailhead. The historical society also played a key role in raising money to establish the new museum in the restored Pleasant Grove House.

It is anticipated that the exhibits in the new museum will be installed by next year’s Old Farm Day on May 4, 2019.

Artist talks about light and shadows

CORRESPONDENT

During the monthly meeting of the Fluvanna Art Association (FAA) Friday (July 20), watercolor artist William Snow discussed more advanced techniques and how to achieve creating light and shadow in watercolor.

Considered one of the most difficult mediums to control, watercolor is made to look easy by artists like Snow. But, as with anything, to become skilled at watercolor artists must practice. Many artists reiterate the same basic practices in order to achieve this goal.

When creating shadows, every artist has his or her own method. Some use black and some, like Snow, prefer to use indigo or ultramarine blue and pull it into the color with the shadows. A lot of art is exploring and experimentation, and many novice artists are afraid of going beyond the boundaries of strict teaching. Snow embraces the basics but also understands boundaries can be limiting if an artist is afraid to try anything new or to loosen up.

He described his method of dealing with light and shadows in a still life he had painted and recreated for the group. The painting featured a dark background with reflections on a pewter tanker and a bowl of fruit. A color wheel is an invaluable tool when it comes to creating light and shadows, and Snow uses these methods to his advantage. While he used mostly oranges in the fruit, he used raw and burnt sienna to begin mid-tone shadows and the opposite deeper color for a full shadow.

Member Deborah Nixon asked why watercolor artists work light to dark, unlike other painting, such as acrylics and oils, in which artists work dark to light. Snow explained it is not that easy to correct a mistake or lift out dark color, so that is why watercolor artists begin with pale washes and work their way into building up layers, doing the very dark areas last.

"That means you have to leave some white areas of the paper and work around them. You can use masking to save these areas," he said. "And put your shadows in last." He then demonstrated how he begins with an outline of the fruit and draws it with a brush. If he uses too much water, he immediately wipes it up with a brush and dries the brush before picking up more paint. This is a habit of watercolor artists and one technique that should always be practiced until it becomes second nature. It is the key to controlling the water on the paper.

Snow uses larger brushes. On the average he uses numbers 7, 8 and 10, and he also works on a slightly larger scale than most of the members. For backgrounds anything less than an 8 or 10 is futile, he said.

"Don't be afraid to use bigger brushes," he said as he swept the burnt sienna and blue to create his mottled background.

Reflections are more of an advanced technique, but once the process is deconstructed it can be mastered with practice.

"Figure where the light areas are and use the lightest colors first and build up," he said. He added the details on the tanker with a smaller brush and obviously a very steady and patient hand.

He reminded the members that one layer of wash may result in a pure pigment, but that it will dry much lighter. He went in to work other areas while one area was drying. This gives him time to view his work and see where color needs to be laid into painting to make it come alive.

Creating realism in any painting is giving it dimension through its light and dark areas.

"Remember, when a light source is close, the harder the edge; the more diffused lighting is, the edges are softer," he said. "Also, shadows are not always dark. You will have some color showing through. Shadows have the same colors as the object or objects and its surroundings."

He wets an area then adds the pigment. To diffuse a shadow, he adds water and pulls it out by wiping it with the brush. "As it begins to dry, pull the color out to emphasize and edge," he said.

These are slow deliberate moves in painting that cannot be rushed, but Snow, being the pro he is, makes it look effortless.

The buckling of watercolor paper is always a concern to members not familiar with the medium. Snow admitted there will be buckling, particularly with a 140 pound hot pressed paper which does not hold the water as well as a sturdy 300 pound paper or watercolor board.

Snow took a moment while sweeping his brush along the background and blending color, to tell the members that many great artists, including John Singer Sargent, Andrew Wyeth and even Leonardo DaVinci, created duds. Even genius has its moments during creation in which not everything is perfect.

Homeless, from page 8

babies to go into an apartment. In fact, if she were told she could no longer stay where she is (which is not ideal) and she had to let Archie and Peanut go, I am certain she would go back homeless on the road and if necessary resurrect the Thelma and Louise pact as an alternative.

I ask you to please help me by thinking outside of your box and "imagine if..." (that beautiful song is most apropos). Call me any time of day or night, and I mean it, at 434-222-7293 and tell me you know of a 500-square foot building that maybe could be a little cottage with some sweat equity and several thousand dollars (that my church folks have generously donated to my discretionary fund). And on top of that, that you would be willing to let Doris and her babies stay there free or maybe for a donation of $100 a month or so, for as long as she wanted. And then when she leaves, you would have a little cottage you could rent for considerably more. Tell me I am crazy. Well, God made me that way then.

Peace, and call me!

P.S. Doris, who absolutely loves all animals, domestic and wild, also has a 26-year-old cockatiel named Jamie.

P.P.S. A huge thank you to the Fluvanna Review for publishing this article.
