Council to Revisit Comprehensive Plan Vote

By Ron Smith
Correspondent

At the September 17th meeting of the Town Council an agenda item called for a vote by that body to accept or reject the version of the Comprehensive Plan that had been presented to Council by the town's Planning Commission. The version presented represented almost a year's work by the Planning Commission.

One aspect of the Comprehensive Plan was the inclusion of the Van Clief Nature Area (VCNA) Master Plan. That part of the "Comp Plan" was reviewed by Councilman Dan Gritsko's committee and presented with changes prior to the call for the vote.

Mayor Nancy Gill called for a vote to accept the Van Clief Master Plan and it was approved. She then called for a vote on the Comprehensive Plan and that too was approved. Council has the authority to make amendments to the Comprehensive Plan and they did that. Unfortunately those changes had not been shared with either the Planning Commission or the public. This left the members of the Planning Commission wondering what had just happened.

Informal discussion of the "what had just happened" moment by Planning Commission members led their chairman, Bill Hyson, to contact the town attorney, James Bowling for his thoughts and comments.

Mr. Bowling, after reviewing the situation, replied by saying, "my review has determined that the June 18th joint hearing and the September 17th meeting at which the Town Council and/or Planning Commission considered amendments to the Comprehensive Plan were not properly advertised by providing a brief description of the amendments to be considered at these meetings, prior to any adoption of the amendments." Mr. Bowling recommended to the Town Council that "they re-advertise a public hearing for amendments to the Comprehensive Plan to be considered at a joint meeting of the Planning Commission and Town Council."

At the regular meeting of the Planning Commission on October 1st, the events of the September 17th Council meeting and the town attorney's thoughts were discussed. Town Administrator Matt Lawless informed the Planning Commission of its options: resubmit the document it had originally submitted or accept the document with the changes Council had made. Since members of the Planning Commission had not had the opportunity to review those changes it was decided to review those at the November meeting of the Planning Commission and hold a public hearing in December after which a document would be presented to Council for action.

Another significant topic that generated much discussion at the meeting

The Cover

The Scottsville Museum announces the sixth annual "Twilight Tours through Scottsville History."

Cover designed by Marilyn Ellinger

was the question of parking regulations for downtown. As parking has been a problem for some time in Scottsville the need to regulate it arises occasionally and this was one of those time.

Councilman Eddie Payne, who's Public Safety Committee has been discussing the topic for a while said that, "two problems are abandoned vehicles and the question of how to enforce regulations with a small police department." Suggestions have ranged from two hour parking zones to parking meters. While Councilman Zack Bullock said he "couldn't support two hour parking because of the problem of enforcement," Vice-Mayor Laura Mellusi was concerned about events that draw people to town that would keep them here for more than two hours."

The Planning Commission also discussed this item October 1st and decided to make informal inquiries with business owners and town residents regarding parking in Scottsville. Those findings will be presented to Council at a future date.

Some people may think that a small town government doesn't do a whole lot. Sit in on any public meeting and you will see just how much there is to do had how much gets accomplished!

Twilight Tours

Contributed by
The Scottsville Museum

The Scottsville Museum announces the sixth annual "Twilight Tours through Scottsville History," happening on Saturday and Sunday, 20–21 October 2018. Come and take a lamplight stroll through historic Scottsville with your tour guide and encounter town residents from bygone eras. Hear their tales and recollections, see notable places and people brought to life from the pages of history.

Travel with Christopher Hudson as he recounts his ride to Monticello and warns Jefferson of the approaching British Army in 1781. Meet Cenie Hornung Moon, who lived in Honolulu during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and hear her recount what happened on the date that will live in infamy. Listen to T.J. Sellers, a true son of the South, raised in Esmont, VA. Mr. Sellers was a pioneering African-American journalist, editor, and newspaper publisher. He advocated for equal rights for all people and was instrumental in forcing the University of Virginia's Law School to accept its first black student.

Local actors, portraying Mayor A. Raymon

Thacker and several figures from Scottsville's past, complete the cast and will recount events spanning from the 1800s until the 1980s.

These hour-long, outdoor walking tours are not handicap-accessible and depart every 20 minutes from the Scottsville Museum on Saturday and Sunday, 20–21 October. Please dress appropriately for an outdoor, evening walking tour.

Returning this year to our Twilight Tours is an indoor performance (handicap accessible) at Scottsville's Victory Hall located at 401 Valley Street. This indoor performance is scheduled for 2 to 3PM on Sunday, 21 October 2018.

Ticket prices for both outdoor and indoor performances are $5.00 and proceeds support the Scottsville Museum, a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of Scottsville's history. Space is limited. Reserve your spot by ordering tickets online at <https://smuseum.avenue.org> or by calling the Museum at 434-286-2247

Please note, no refunds will be given. Event occurs rain or shine. If you have questions, please e-mail Twilight Tour co-chairperson, Terri Long, at smuse-

Scottsville Family of Four Displaced by Fire

By Ron Smith
Correspondent

An early morning fire Thursday, October 4th, has left a Scottsville family of four displaced. Fire units responded shortly before 7:30am to the 400 block of James River Road to find a single story structure completely involved. Although there were no injuries, the family lost not only their home but all their personal belongings.

Several churches, businesses and other organizations in Scottsville have begun a fund raising effort on behalf of the Besecker family whose home was lost.

To donate or for more information contact Scottsville United Methodist Church, (434) 286-4736.

October: A Busy Month in Scottsville

By Ron Smith
Correspondent

The month of October is shaping up to be a busy one for the town of Scottsville. In addition to youth soccer being in full swing, and the farmers market still operating, several other activities are planned. These events will not only be presented by local residents, they will be events that will bring others to our fair town.

On Sunday, October 14,th at 7:00pm, Scottsville Presbyterian Church will host a presentation by the Rev. David Garth titled "Unveiling Racism: A Way Toward Healing". The Rev. Garth will speak of his recent trip to Montgomery, Alabama to deliver soil from an Albemarle County site where a lynching occurred, to the new lynching memorial in Montgomery. Afterwards Scottsville leaders will speak on the history of racism in the town. A reception will follow and the event is free and open to the public.

The Scottsville Lions Club will host a Bingo on Wednesday, October 24,th at 7pm in the Social Hall of Scottsville United Methodist Church. Proceeds from this event will be used by the local Lions for the benefit of the community. The Lions Club helps with the purchase of glasses, supports youth sports, the Scottsville Volunteer Fire Department and the Scottsville Rescue Squad. They also present each third grader at Scottsville Elementary School with their own dictionary, something the SOL program requires the students know how to use.

Raising hope for the Monarch Migration

By Brenda Marks
Contributor

Brenda seen here with her cage (butterfly delivery room). She places watermelon, orange slices inside the cage along with flowers and milkweed for them to eat till they are set free. Photo courtesy of Brenda Marks.

I got my natural love of flowers from my mother, however, I was never fond of caterpillars until I became interested in the butterfly garden. I am presently a member of the Buckingham/ Dillwyn Garden Club. That was when I started to research as much as I could about butterflies and especially Monarchs. It is more than just planting flowers, it is researching the correct flowers for the benefit of the butterflies, for both spring and fall.

Mother Nature can be brutal to the Monarch caterpillar, they have a long list of predators and a shortage of food supply. If Monarchs are going to stay off the "endangered species list" they need more to eat and we can help, but they only eat milkweed. They used to feast on milkweed in corn and wheat fields, but then the Herbicide Glyphosate was widely used on GMO crop fields, resulting in the lose of most of the milkweed. Now they rely on milkweed from other places.

Their life cycle is not only beautiful, but is mesmerizing! It is awesome to be able to witness the change from the egg to the 5 stages of the caterpillar. Now it's time to climb to a sheltered, safe spot in which to pupate. He makes a simple silk pad on the most unusual places in my enclosure. It uses a hook covered appendage called a "crewmaster" to attach it to this pad. The caterpillar hangs in a "J" position and starts to twist around until it sheds it's skin revealing a soft chrysalis. It takes about 1 hour to for the chrysalis to harden into a beautiful jade green, wearing a crown of gold pearls! In about 7 to 14 days a beautiful Monarch will emerge.

We can help future Monarchs by planting milkweed. There are many species that are native specific per State. milkweed is critical to their survival. They only lay eggs on the milkweed plants.

Resources or blogs are helpful before achieving a healthy success. My favorite Blog is Monarchbutterflygarden.net. This Blog is an awesome resource and guide to help with the challenges of raising healthy butterflies.

I collected my first caterpillars toward the end of August. I found 18 caterpillars on my milkweed competing for leaves with Aphids and another 28+ on milkweed found in other places. Caterpillars and eggs can be collected and raised from Spring and thru September and still be released for migration for Fall. Butterfly enclosures are readily available on line along with flower tubes for milkweed stems and flower pot water trays are great for catching Caterpillar "frass" droppings. The most important thing I can pass on is to clean your enclosure frequently you will be shocked how much caterpillars can poop!! Not doing this could possibly endanger your cats in case you have some that are compromised with parasites or viruses.

So that means, good hand washing!!! When handling all aspects of raising, especially Milkweed, remember, do your research before you jeopardize any caterpillars. Raising these beautiful creatures and watching their amazing metamorphosis is addictive and enchanting. And for goodness sake do not start unless you have enough to feed them!!! You don't want to have a 911 caterpillar emergency!

We can help the fall migrating Monarchs heading south by planting flowers that bloom longer into late summer, early fall, like lantana, sedum, cone flower, mexican sunflowers etc. So think about planting a butterfly garden! Every backyard can become an oasis for Monarchs and other pollinators, even in cities, schools, youth and community groups. Engage in planting and protecting monarch habitat along roadsides, rights of way, and other public and private lands. Also visit the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service "Save the Monarch Butterfly" web page.

A beautiful Jade Green Chrysalis. In about 7 to 14 days a beautiful Monarch will emerge.

4th Instar caterpillars competing for milkweed with the aphids.
