Man found dead in Lake house fire

No suspects sought

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

Firefighters combating a blaze at 4 Roadview Terrace in Lake Monticello discovered the body of a man inside, according to the Fluvanna County Sheriff's Office.

Lake Monticello Fire and Rescue and other area fire departments responded to the scene at around 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday (April 3) after the blaze was reported at 3:17 p.m.

The body was discovered by firefighters and was later transported to the Chief Medical Examiner's Office in Richmond. Authorities believe the man is one of the homeowners, but it may take several weeks to make a positive identification through DNA analysis, according to the sheriff's office.

Crews from multiple agencies worked to extinguish the fire, but the house was severely damaged.

No suspects are sought in connection with fire or the death, and there is no threat to public safety, according to the sheriff's office.

The Fluvanna County Sheriff's Office and the Virginia State Police are investigating the scene. It will take several weeks to obtain lab results and finalize the fire cause and origin investigation, according to the sheriff's office.

Lake Monticello Fire and Rescue declined to comment, citing the ongoing investigation.

"The family requests privacy during this tragic time in their lives," wrote Capt. David Wells of the sheriff's office in a press release. "They also request that members of the media and the general public please stay off their property."

TAX TIPS

BY RUDY GARCIA, RIVANNA WOODS FINANCIAL / TAX SERVICES

Tick tock the Clock is running out!

Can you believe it? April 15th is next Monday! You have been waiting to file your taxes and finally you have almost everything you need. But you don't think you can finish by April 15th. You are starting to get nervous and feeling a bit overwhelmed.

Don't Worry, File an Extension!

Did you know that almost everyone can receive an automatic six-month extension from the IRS? And you don't even have to have a reason. It is as easy as completing the IRS Form 4868, Application for Automatic Extension of Time To File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return and putting it in the mail before April 15th 2019. Make sure you keep a copy with the date you mailed it, or better yet, use the IRS Free File System to request an extension online.

But wait there must be a catch, right? Well if you are expecting a refund, there is no catch. However, if you did not have enough withholdings or estimated tax payments in 2018 to cover your tax liability, you may have to pay interest and penalties on any underpayment.

The easiest way to avoid penalties and interest is to pay what you owe before April 15th 2019. Don't have enough cash on hand to pay in full? Don't worry, file an Online Payment Agreement application to the IRA or complete and mail IRS Form 9465 Installment Agreement Request.

What you don't want to do is to ignore the fact that April 15th is coming and you should take action if you haven't yet filed your taxes. If all of this sounds daunting, don't worry, we can help! Remember we work hard to take the complications out of filing your taxes! Simply call us at 434-442-4044 or email us at info@rwftaxservices.com. We want to help.

Old Farm Day Shows off Fluvanna Past and Present

Jackie Bland, Old Farm Day Committee Co-chair

On Saturday, May 4, 2019, Old Farm Day - Fluvanna County's premier community festival will celebrate its 23rd Anniversary. Held at Pleasant Grove Park, Old Farm Day has become a family tradition in Central Virginia. Old Farm Day started 23 years ago when several local farmers and members of the Fluvanna Historical Society wanted to educate the public about Fluvanna's agricultural heritage, and particularly farming's evolution over the past 100+ years.

Old Farm Day has evolved into one of the largest community events in Fluvanna County. It features displays of vintage farm equipment and other antique vehicles, demonstrations by heritage crafters, 4-H demonstrations, educational activities and games for kids, a tater hunt, pie baking contest, toe-tapping music, great food and wine tasting, and numerous vendors from crafters to local businesses from around Central Virginia. We also have some modern-day equipment on display that typically replaces several farming practices, both old-time 'automated' and manual labor. Proceeds benefit the Fluvanna Historical Society and the fund to support the Farm Heritage Museum.

Old Farm Day attracts over 4,500 visitors from the Central Virginia region to this one-day event. The event is an all-volunteer affair. In addition to the 20-person committee that organizes and executes the event, volunteers come from all generations; girl scouts, football players, FUMA Cadets, Moms, Dads, grandparents and retirees. Some of us even have recruited our grandkids. All told, it takes over 100 volunteers starting days before the event to transport the equipment to the park, mark vendor spaces, put up fencing, distribute advertisements and banners, and much more! It's great to 'work' on this wonderful event that brings the whole community together to celebrate Fluvanna's heritage.

Our promotion and advertising reaches beyond Fluvanna County to the broader region, and really helps drive tourism to the county. Every year we have exhibitors and vendors from Richmond, Goochland, Culpeper, Waynesboro, etc. and they have their 'following.' We also have a listing on the Virginia Tourism site, Virginia.org; they provide information on all sorts of things to do and see in Virginia, including Old Farm Day!

We all know the great treasure we have here in Fluvanna, and Old Farm Day helps current and new residents, and other visitors learn about those treasures, prompting repeat visits to the area. Once they visit they are more likely to return to Pleasant Grove Park, the new Farm Heritage Museum, and our Historic county seat, the Village of Palmyra, just to name a few. Here is hoping we see you at this year's event! Visit www.oldfarmday.org or email Info@oldfarmday.org for more information

Supervisors Crime victims honored for perseverance

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

The Fluvanna County Board of Supervisors opened its Wednesday (April 3) meeting with a special award presentation in honor of National Crime Victims' Rights Week.

For victims, the crime itself is often just the start of a long journey – one that can require them to relive their trauma again and again as cases work their way through the justice system.

To recognize the sheer grit involved in seeing cases through to the end, Commonwealth's Attorney Jeff Haislip and Victim Witness Coordinator Sherri Stader handed out the Lisa Black Victim Perseverance Award to survivors of two shootings that have taken place in Fluvanna in recent years.

"I absolutely love my job," said Stader in her opening remarks. "I get to meet the most incredible, strong people in the world."

Haislip first introduced Jackie Gillespie, a retired 33-year veteran of the Fluvanna County Sheriff's Office and former Fluvanna County sheriff who found himself in the middle of a gunfight one afternoon in November 2016.

Gillespie was helping his friends Garnette and Scott Bourne transport an old bus engine to the garage on Garnette Bourne's property off Route 618 (Lake Monticello Road) when they were confronted by armed gunman Gary Blowe, who had been attempting to rob the apartment above the garage.

Blowe suddenly started firing at them. Showing "courage I don't think I could summon," Gillespie began returning fire, Haislip said, leaving several bullet holes in Blowe's car as he fled the scene. If not for Gillespie's actions, "Gary Blowe would have left three dead people."

Haislip said Gillespie had worked closely with law enforcement and prosecutors as the case against Blowe and three other defendants moved through the system.

"The only thing I can say is: It was a rough day," said Gillespie.

The second set of recipients included the survivors of an April 2017 incident on Hardware Hills Circle in Scottsville.

On the night of April 30, 2017, Michael Townsend was talking with his neighbor, Kimberly Clements, and her young son, Caleb. Suddenly, their neighbor Joe Roach began screaming obscenities and firing his rifle in their direction.

As Roach continued to fire, Townsend and Clements shielded 6-year-old Caleb with their own bodies to get him safely into the Clements' home. Townsend returned to his home, where his wife, Judy Townsend, had alerted their daughter, Sarah Williams, who rushed to the house.

Williams was hit near the eye by a piece of shrapnel. Doctors later said she came within millimeters of sustaining a potentially fatal wound.

Sarah Williams, Kimberly Clements, and the Townsends persevered through multiple hearings, long delays, and a grueling day-long trial, but as a result, Roach "won't be back in their neighborhood again," Haislip said.

Gary Blowe was sentenced to 42 years in prison in May 2018; Joe Roach was given 58 years in November 2018.

The awards were handed out by Lisa Black, the survivor of a near-fatal crash caused by a drunk driver in October 2014. She was the first recipient of the award in 2017, and the award was then named in her honor.

Island Hill

Following the awards ceremony, supervisors moved through a light agenda. Chair Mike Sheridan (Columbia) and Supervisor Mozell Booker (Fork Union) were not in attendance. Supervisor Tony O'Brien (Rivanna) chaired the meeting.

Supervisors Trish Eager (Palmyra) and O'Brien attended a community meeting held by residents of Broken Island and Lake Monticello's Riverside section over the proposed 49-unit Island Hill housing development near the intersection of Broken Island Road and South Boston Road (Route 600).

"I think the yield plan for Island Hill should be looked at very, very carefully," said Eager, citing concerns over the parcel's steep slopes and the small buffers between the proposed development and the existing neighborhoods. "These are things we should look at before we give it a seal of approval," she added.

"I don't think you have a seal of approval," said County Administrator Steve Nichols. Approval of housing developments is an administrative decision.

Jason Stewart, director of community development, and County Attorney Fred Payne told the board that the developer had resolved several issues that came up in the initial application.

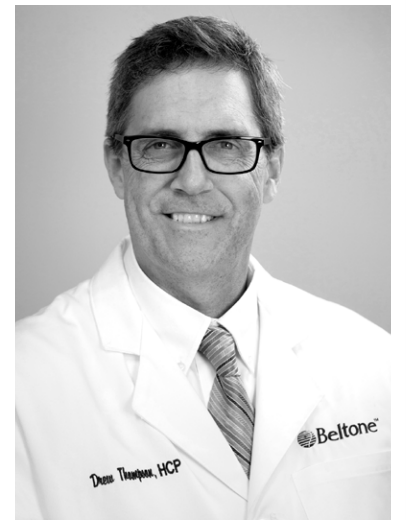

While the board may not be able to revisit Island Hill, Eager argued that "it's time to take a fresh look at our ordinances."

Nichols said there were potential tweaks the Planning Commission or the supervisors might be able to make to existing zoning ordinances in the short term while planning a comprehensive look in the future.

O'Brien said that most of the audience at the community meeting had seemed resigned to the idea that Island Hill was going to be built, but said the issues they raised might benefit the county in the future. "We'll make better rural subdivisions going forward," he said.

FCHS theatre presents The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time

SUBMITTED BY CRAIG EDGERTON

"I like dogs. You always know what a dog is thinking. It has four moods. Happy, sad, cross and concentrating. Also, dogs are faithful and they do not tell lies because they cannot talk." Christopher is 15 years old. He is a math genius. He wants to be an astronaut. He likes dogs, and he has autism.

Fluvanna County High School (FCHS) theatre is excited to produce The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time for the spring play. The play opens when Christopher, played by sophomore Simon Skinner, discovers the neighbor's dog was murdered with a pitchfork. He then decides it is his job to "detect who killed Wellington," but what he uncovers is oh, so much more.

Based on the best-selling novel by Mark Haddon and adapted for the stage by Simon Stephen, the production won the Tony Award in 2015 for best play on Broadway. "After the success of Almost, Maine two years ago, we are returning to the Black Box for this production," said Craig Edgerton, FCHS drama teacher. "It is an intimate story, so we wanted an intimate setting, a space that will bring the actor closer to the audience. This play deals with family and how an autistic child copes with the struggles families can face."

The play is part comedy, part drama, part mystery, but all heart! The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time opens Wednesday (April 17) and continues April 18, 19, and 20. Obituary

Lt. Col. William F. Henson

Our father, Lieutenant Colonel (Retired) William Frank Henson, died Saturday, April 6, 2019, at Westminster Canterbury of the Blue Ridge at the age of 91. He was the beloved husband of the late Jane Henson. Born in Knoxville, Tenn., son of the late Manley and Louise Henson, Bill lived in Lake Monticello and Charlottesville for the past five years, and previously, was a longtime resident of Heathsville in the Northern Neck of Virginia.

Bill entered the Army in 1950 and shortly thereafter deployed to his first assignment to the Philippines as a young second lieutenant, beginning a career that spanned almost 26 years and assignments across four continents, and multiple command and staff positions. During his Army career, he graduated from Texas A&M with a bachelor of science in civil engineering and later, earned a master of science in engineering from Michigan State University. His service as a commissioned officer with the U.S. Corps of Engineers included participation in and leadership of many dramatic projects around the world. From the Philippines, to geodesic engineering and mapping of the Republic of Korea, to bridging the Rhine River in Germany in the 1950s, to officer in charge of the U.S. Army Joint Mapping Program in Honduras in the 1960s, to Project Engineer, Far East District, Korea, to assistant engineer commissioner of the District of Columbia, he was the epitome of selfless service.

Bill married the former Jane Surface in 1951 and together they raised three children: Bill (Linda) Henson, Jr., of Olney, Md.; Marion "Lou" (Bob) Lamb of Palmyra, Va.; and John (Kimberlee) Henson of Carlisle, Penn. As an Army family, they were experienced at moving from assignment to assignment, including a 3,500 mile car trip up the Pan American highway in an 8-year-old station wagon, from Tegucigalpa, Honduras to McLean, Va. When asked why he would undertake such a journey, Bill simply said, "I really liked that car."

He was a loving grandfather of Robert (Maria), Andrew (Jennifer) and Christopher Lamb; Sharon, Susan, and Sarah Henson; and Lauren (Ericka) and Ryan (Olivia) Henson and was the beloved great-grandfather of Isabella, Charlotte, Violet and Arianna.

Following his service to our nation, he worked as the Washington office executive director of the American Public Works Association and in 1977 he and Jane retired to Heathsville and together made their home at Sunnyside (circa 1820). During these wonderful years together, they indulged in his passion for sailing, restoring old cars, and the challenges of managing a home built in 1820. It included leadership at St. Stephens Episcopal Church as senior warden as well as service on various community projects, including the board of the Northumberland Library and important historical preservation work at Rice's Hotel-Hughlett's Tavern. Bill served his nation, his community, and his church. He was a quiet, kind, and graceful man of faith, loved by his friends and cherished by his family.

Funeral services will be conducted Sunday, April 14, 2019, at 1 p.m. at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Simeon, 1333 Thomas Jefferson Parkway, Charlottesville, Va.

Interment will be held Monday, April 15, 2019, at 11 a.m. at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Cemetery in Heathsville, Va.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in his memory may be made to www.episcoparelieve.org.

Melissa Davis joins Monticello Country Realtors

PRESS RELEASE

Vicki Wilson and Craig McCormick, owners of Monticello Country Realtors, are pleased to announce another new addition to their real estate family. Melissa Davis, a licensed Realtor who has spent the past several years working as a real estate agent for 1st Dominion Realty in Charlottesville, has officially joined their busy Lake Monticello-based firm.

"From the start, I have focused almost exclusively on representing clients looking to buy or sell homes in Lake Monticello and its neighboring communities, so this move makes perfect sense for me," Davis said. "I wanted to work for a local firm, and Monticello Country Realtors – with its deep local roots and outstanding reputation – easily stood out as the most attractive possibility. I feel grateful that Vicki and Craig have welcomed me to their wonderful firm, and I look forward to joining a team with such an impressive track record of providing excellent service to the local community."

Prior to entering the real estate business, Davis enjoyed a long and decorated career as an investigative reporter focused on exposing financial/securities fraud. She continues to write on a volunteer basis for the Lake Views. She also serves on the communications and marketing committee at Lake Monticello. She is the past treasurer of the Lake Monticello Newcomers and Old Friends Club and a 2017 graduate of the Fluvanna Leadership Development Program.

James Kelley announces School Board run

BY RUTHANN CARR

Weeks ago before the University of Virginia (U.Va.) men's basketball team made it to the Final Four, James Kelley chose 6 p.m. Saturday to hold a party at his house to announce his run for the Palmyra District School Board seat.

Game day Saturday, April 6; tip-off time 6:05 p.m.

Kelley made it work.

With the game on multiple big-screen TVs, meat on the grill and drinks on ice, Kelley welcomed about 50 guests. After the game, Kelley announced his student-centered candidacy.

"If I'm lucky enough to sit behind that table the only metric I'll use to make decisions is how it will affect the children," Kelley said.

The Fluvanna Review asked Kelley several questions about himself and his run for School Board.

Tell us about yourself.

I'm a business consultant and data analyst. Most of my life has revolved around education – I'm the product of a public school system in a county with a great deal of similarities to Fluvanna. I graduated from St. Mary's College, a public honors college in Maryland, I received my Ph.D. in political science a few months ago from Temple University, and I've taught about a dozen classes at the graduate and undergraduate level.

Some of my professional experience includes conducting research for universities. Most of my opportunities and success have been possible because of my education – because of teachers and professors who mentored me, who saw talent and encouraged me to want more. I hope to be an advocate for the students of Fluvanna so that they have similar opportunities.

Why are you running for School Board?

I'm running because I've been the beneficiary of a strong community, amazing teachers, and encouraging mentors. Now that I'm finished with my Ph.D., it's time to give back. This is one way I can positively impact others' lives.

Why now? [Current Palmyra representative] Brenda Pace has served on the School Board faithfully for eight years. I've seen firsthand the importance of the decisions she's made and the compassion with which she approaches them. As she retires, it's time for someone to step forward and serve. I'm running because I think my personal, professional and educational experiences make me a strong advocate for students.

Do you have children and if so, where are they schooled?

We do not have children yet. There were a lot of things we wanted to accomplish before starting our family. First, we wanted to be embedded in a community we cared about. Second, we wanted to own our own home. Third, we wanted to be finished with school. We feel like we're there now, as I just completed my Ph.D. in January. My wife, Sharon Kelley, finished a few years ago. We're excited for the next chapter of our lives that includes things like a family and increased community service.

By statute, candidates for School Board are to run independent of party affiliation. Why do you think that is?

I think this may be one of the smartest statutes in the Virginia code. I don't believe political parties serve any purpose with regards to School Boards. A School Board member's focus should be on those who will ultimately be impacted by their policies, including students, parents, teachers, staff and administration. When politics become an issue, these groups suffer. Frankly, I believe if School Board members consider their (D) or (R) identification before casting a vote, they are doing a great disservice to the community.

How do you feel about party politics and how they should or shouldn't affect how a School Board member votes?

I believe every School Board decision should be evaluated based on its impact on students. If proposals are not in the students' best interest then they should not be adopted.

How much time per month do you feel a School Board member should be willing to put into the job?

The business of the School Board ebbs and flows throughout the year depending on where we are in the budgetary cycle. ...I think an elected member should be willing to put as much time as is required for them to contribute meaningfully to the community. I'm fortunate that I work at home and feel like I have a large amount of time to dedicate to the School Board. I can tell you that I'm spending about 20 hours a week now attending school-related meetings and talking to parents. If I'm lucky enough to serve the Palmyra district I don't see that time commitment changing.

How do you think the School Board should approach the annual budget? In the most recent budget building sessions, a board member didn't want to just start with last year's budget as a base, but build it from the ground up. Others expressed frustration that the budget goes up every year.

I'm not shocked that budgets rise over time – the cost of labor and materials rise globally each year. School systems are not immune to these factors. That said, I'm a data analyst and business consultant and I believe that strategic planning is critical to any organization's success.

I believe budgets should be based on the previous year's planned and actual expenditures. It's helpful to start with the previous year's budget as a base case, because most of the changes that happen year to year are likely to happen on the margins. For instance, salaries and infrastructural costs are unlikely to change greatly. But within discretionary and programmatic spending, we should be eager to reassess our priorities. Specifically, line by line: What are we spending the money on, what outcomes did we expect or anticipate from spending the money, and is it working? Are there new ideas that merit funding at the expense of these other things? Ultimately it's the School Board's responsibility to spend the budget wisely and, as the old adage says, "do more with less." It's my hope to bring metric-driven decision making to the budget process.

What do you see as budget priorities?

My biggest priorities, in no particular order, are:

Career and technical education

Regardless of where students are headed after high school, Fluvanna graduates must have the skills necessary to be successful. ... Right now we have about 12 strong CTE programs which are doing great things to prepare students for both college and the workforce. ...I'm committed to protecting, funding and expanding our offerings as we can afford to do so. Specifically, we don't have classes for students who want to become welders, electricians or auto mechanics. I'd love to start a partnership with local businesses so we can prepare students for careers in these fields, among others.

Competitive, reliable teacher pay

Teachers are some of the most undervalued professionals in the workforce. Fluvanna has a responsibility to provide teachers with competitive and reliable pay. I believe we need to compare what we pay with those counties we compete against, and close those gaps so we can attract the best and brightest teachers. I believe we should smooth the scale over time so teachers can anticipate and receive reliable increases in pay. The existing steps, which offer small increases followed by larger increases at particular years of service, make it difficult for Fluvanna to honor their commitment in years when a large teacher cohort hits those milestones. I will work hard to provide a competitive starting salary and provide reliable increases so that teachers receive what we promise them.

Low student-teacher ratio

Gaps in academic achievement between students appear early in education and do not narrow over time. In other words, these performance gaps are real and they are often permanent. One tool we have in our arsenal to prevent them from occurring is individualized attention. Students learn at different paces, and respond to teaching techniques differently, but the smaller the class sizes, especially in grades K-2, the more time a teacher has to focus on each student and discover how they learn best.

Mental and behavioral health

According to a national study, one in five children has a diagnosable emotional, behavioral or mental health disorder. These disorders require specialized treatment by qualified mental health professionals. Public schools can't provide all the services that students require, but we must have the specialized staff to help teachers identify students with needs, assist in treatment planning, and advocate for students and parents to receive services.

Fluvanna County Public Schools has one social worker for 3,500 students spread across six buildings. The National Association of Social Workers recommends one social worker for every 250 students (and 1:150 for students with intensive needs). That means Fluvanna has about 13 fewer social workers than is recommended. We can't make up that difference overnight, but having more mental and behavioral health professionals will lead to better outcomes for students and provide teachers with additional support.

School safety

School safety is an issue I've been hearing a lot about as I knock on doors and have conversations with parents. Specifically, I hear a lot about bullying and physical safety. In order to learn, students must be rested, well-nourished, and feel safe in their environment. When these basic needs aren't met, students aren't at their best. I will fight to ensure that students are safe in our buildings and that we continue to identify bullying early and prevent it. I know the current board is having conversations about this and that the administration is working on bullying prevention. I'm eager to join these conversations and help produce thoughtful solutions.

Students of color are disproportionately represented in discipline issues. Do you think that's a problem, and if so, what solutions do you propose?

A 2013-14 non-partisan study by the Government Accountability Office revealed that students of color, boys, and students with disabilities are statistically overrepresented in all discipline categories nationwide. According to a 2017 presentation by Dr. James Mathieson, the Fluvanna director of testing and accountability, Fluvanna's discipline data reveals a similar trend for students of color and for those students who come from less wealthy families (as defined by free and reduced lunch qualification). Fluvanna is not alone; this is a nationwide problem.

I believe the solution to most behavioral-discipline issues lies in smaller class sizes and adequate staffing of social workers and guidance counselors. Then, our great teachers and staff have more opportunities to work with their students, and when behavioral problems can't be addressed in the classroom, social workers or guidance counselors can intervene ahead of formal disciplinary processes. If we give students and school personnel an opportunity to work through why the behavior problems exist, we have a better chance at keeping students in school and learning, as opposed to out of school and falling behind.

There's a growing concern that students are tested too often. What are your thoughts?

Most of our testing is state or federally mandated. Even if the School Board wanted to halt all testing, they legally couldn't without losing vital sources of funding. Standardized testing is helpful in a lot of ways: It gives us the metrics we need to measure ourselves; it can help us track changes in performance across time and between demographic groups. However, I believe the burden for any non-mandated testing must be outweighed by the benefits our students will see from these evaluations.

The Fluvanna Review wins seven VPA awards

Virginia Press Association

Hits 100 percent award rate for news coverage

By Christina Dimeo, editor

The Fluvanna Review won seven Virginia Press Association (VPA) awards for its news coverage and advertising design in 2018.

For the first time since the Fluvanna Review began participating in the VPA competition, every news entry the newspaper submitted won an award.

Editor Christina Dimeo won first place in government writing for her pre-and post-election coverage and third place in government writing for her Board of Supervisors coverage.

Correspondent Ruthann Carr took first place in education writing for her reporting on the controversy that roiled over the LGBTQ rainbow Fluco symbol.

Correspondent Heather Michon won third place in public safety writing for her courts coverage, which included detailed breakdowns of two Fluvanna shooting sprees.

Advertising designer Lynn Stayton-Eurell won first place in lifestyles advertising, third place in member self-promotion advertising, and third place in professional/technology services advertising.

The announcement was made at the annual VPA banquet held Saturday (April 6) in Norfolk.

The Fluvanna Review has now won 88 VPA awards since 2010.

"I'm proud of my staff and of the newspaper," said publisher Carlos Santos. "I think the VPA awards show how hard we work to bring the very best newspaper we can to Fluvanna County residents every week, 52 weeks a year."

The Fluvanna Review competed against other non-dailies with circulations ranging between 3,500 and 6,999. The Fluvanna Review prints 6,300 copies each week and circulates in Fluvanna, parts of Charlottesville, Albemarle and Louisa counties.

Journalists from the Iowa Press Association judged the contest.

Supervisors battle lawsuits over rezoning disputes

BY CHRISTINA DIMEO, EDITOR

The Fluvanna County Board of Supervisors is battling two lawsuits filed against it in connection with the Board's decision to rezone land upon which LKQ Corporation, a Fortune 500 company, intends to build an auto reclamation facility.

Supervisors changed the zoning of a 90-acre parcel of land off Route 250 in Troy from agricultural to industrial last December after an intense public hearing in which several Fluvanna landowners, including Katie and Walker Ward, spoke in opposition.

Now the Wards are suing supervisors for that decision.

Carroll Morris is also suing supervisors over their March 28 decision to deny him industrial rezoning of his agricultural able.

The Wards are asking the court to void the rezoning.

Supervisors filed a demurrer Feb. 23 that disagreed with the Wards' allegations. First, they dispute that the notice was inadequate. The law requires that the Board provide a descriptive summary of the proposed action – which was the rezoning itself – not any potential actions by private third parties, according to the demurrer. The Board has no control over, and therefore cannot speak to, whether LKQ actually comes to the county.

The demurrer also states that the Wards were "informed enough about the Board's pending action to send a two-page letter to the county Planning Commission and Board, and to follow up with

Supervisors put meals tax on November ballot

Voters will decide on 4 percent tax

BY CHRISTINA DIMEO, EDITOR

Fluvanna residents will vote in November on whether to institute a meals tax.

The Fluvanna County Board of Supervisors unanimously decided Wednesday (Aug. 1) to direct county staff to prepare an ordinance that would impose a meals tax. By law, Fluvanna voters need to approve the ordinance before it takes effect.

If voters approve, the meals tax will be set at 4 percent. Virginia code caps county meals taxes at 4 percent and requires voter approval. Cities and towns may set a meals tax of up to 8 percent and do not need a referendum.

Jason Smith, community and economic development director, estimated that about 21 businesses in Fluvanna would be affected by the tax.

If the food is served or sold in Fluvanna then it would be subject to the meals tax, regardless of whether it was prepared in an outside county.

The money collected from the meals tax would go into the county's general fund. Supervisors can't promise that the money will be spent on certain areas, such as education or public safety, because they don't have the power to prescribe the spending of future Boards. A voter's guide to the Nov. 6 ballot

Fluvanna residents will vote in November on whether to institute a meals tax.

The Fluvanna County Board of Supervisors unanimously decided Wednesday (Aug. 1) to direct county staff to prepare an ordinance that would impose a meals tax. By law, Fluvanna voters need to approve the ordinance before it takes effect.

If voters approve, the meals tax will be set at 4 percent. Virginia code caps county meals taxes at 4 percent and requires voter approval. Cities and towns may set a meals tax of up to 8 percent and do not need a referendum.

Next Tuesday's (Nov. 6) midterm election is a big deal to people of all political stripes. Information and opinions about how Fluvanna voters should cast their ballots in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives races.

Less discussed are the Virginia constitutional amendments that seem to pop up on the ballot every year. What are they and what exactly do they mean – in plain English?

Local option

Delegate Rob Bell (R-Albemarle), who represents part of Fluvanna in the 58th District, pointed out that this amendment is a local option. "All it does is allow the locality to do things that the state telling which you can't do," he said.

Some localities near Virginia's coast, and even nearby Greene County, have experienced such flooding recently that they wanted the ability to partially exempt from real estate taxes homeowners who under took flood abatement measures, Bell said. As the law stands right now, they can't.

If this issue doesn't resonate with a particular county, the county doesn't have to enact the exemption.

Fluvanna splits ticket on Election Day

Wallops proposed meals tax

BY CHRISTINA DIMEO, EDITOR

Fluvanna split its ticket on Election Day (Nov. 6), going for Democrat Tim Kaine for U.S. Senate and Republican Denver Riggleman for U.S. House of Representatives for the 5th District.

In doing so, Fluvanna accurately represented the election outcomes in Virginia. Kaine and Riggleman won their races, and the amendments Fluvanna approved succeeded statewide.

Kaine took 5,976 Fluvanna votes (49.8 percent), while Republican candidate Corey Stewart took 5,789 votes (48.3 percent). Libertarian Matt Waters took 217 votes (1.8 percent).

Statewide Kaine received 57.0 percent of the vote, Stewart received 41.0 percent, and Waters received 1.8 percent.

Riggleman carried the county, earning 6,168 Fluvanna votes (51.5 percent), while Democratic candidate Leslie Cockburn earned 5,785 votes (48.3 percent), losing their home's tax-exempt status. Fluvanna approved this amendment with 9,667 votes (81.9 percent), while 2,140 votes (18.1 percent) disagreed. Statewide the amendment passed by a margin of 84.4 to 15.6 percent.

Counties, cities and towns will now be authorized to provide a partial tax exemption for real property that is subject to recurring flooding, if flooding resiliency improvements have been made on the property. This amendment passed in Fluvanna with 7,609 votes (64.8 percent) while 4,138 voters (35.2 percent) disagreed. The amendment succeeded statewide by a margin of 70.8 percent to 29.3 percent.

Cunningham continued its tradition of being the most conservative district in Fluvanna County. It favored Stewart over Kaine by 58.4 to 39.6 percent, and Riggleman over Cockburn by 61.6 to 38.2 percent. Cunningham also voted down the meals tax more strongly than the other precincts – by a vote of 26.9 to 73.1 percent.

Palmyra arguably edged Rivanna for most liberal district this year. Palmyra favored Kaine over Stewart by 52.9 to 44.7 percent and Cockburn over Riggleman by 51.9 to 47.9 percent. Rivanna favored Kaine over Stewart by 52.9 to 45.0 percent and Cockburn over Riggleman by 50.7 to 49.2 percent.

Supervisors approve controversial auto reclamation facility

BY CHRISTINA DIMEO, EDITOR

A Fortune 500 company is on its way to Fluvanna County.

The Board of Supervisors Wednesday night (March 28) unanimously approved a special use permit to allow LKQ Corporation, an auto reclamation company, to open a facility off Route 250 near Zion Crossroads.

The proposal was met with hot resistance from several neighbors in the nearby Fox Glen subdivision and surrounding areas, who believe the facility doesn't belong near their homes.

Over 50 people filled the benches in the Fluvanna Circuit Courtroom – a for further metal recycling. The yard kept clean and neat with cars in orderly rows.

Operations inside the facility, which covers a fraction of the 90-acre parcel of land, can operate 24 hours a day. Trucks will be lit, and pickup trucks will shuttle around the yard continuously as workers seek the parts they need. Crushing takes place regularly, and said Caddy – it makes a lot of noise.

Budget pressures force tax increase

BY CHRISTINA DIMEO, CORRESPONDENT

Budget pressures will force another tax increase, the Fluvanna County Board of Supervisors learned Wednesday (Feb. 7) afternoon.

While presenting his fiscal year 2019 (FY19) budget, County Administrator Steve Nichols recommended raising the real estate tax to 93.9 cents per $100 valuation from the current 90.7 cents. This constitutes a 3.5 percent tax increase.

But Nichols' budget contains no additional money for the school system – an issue supervisors will need to address.

For at least the past two budget cycles, Nichols' proposed budgets have not included additional money for the schools.

Nichols indicated that he would recommend lowering the tax again next year.

"There is no one, absolutely no one in...the Central Virginia region that pays less for business taxes than Fluvanna County businesses," Nichols said. "No one...not even close."

The county must pay a whopping $9.8 million in debt service in FY19.

"There's never an easy budget year," Nichols told supervisors, "but I thought this was going to be relatively easy because I thought our revenues would be more robust at this time. They're not. But this budget is, in relation to the last one, a way it is."

"I don't think that's really a good excuse," Weaver said.

"It's not an excuse; it's a fact," Nichols said.

The county could have a lower real estate tax rate if the Board were willing to implement other taxes, said Supervisor Tony O'Brien. "It isn't fair to compare our county to other counties and say, 'We're the highest,' when...continually as a Board you decide not to apply other tactics," he said. "We're doing that by our design."

Weaver did not respond.

The county has $6.3 million of unassigned money in its general fund. But Nichols noted that most of the money, while technically unassigned, has been earmarked for projects.

"I think that for the public...unless they pay attention...they could be misled by how [low] our fund balance really is," O'Brien said. "It's really a very tight, tight situation."

"You've got $1.7 million in unrestricted fund balance," said Nichols, referring to the money that has not been earmarked. "That's not very much."

Nichols' proposal forms the backbone of the county's budget. Over the course of budget season supervisors will make changes, especially to high profile expenses such as school funding and sheriff's office requests. But the vast majority of the thousands of line items pass from Nichols' proposed budget into reality.

Supervisors will meet weekly through mid-April to hash out specifics and plan to vote on the budget and associated tax rates April 11.

In other matters:

- Supervisors voted unanimously to hire Pearson's Appraisal to take over reassessment services for the county. The county's current firm, Blue Ridge Mass Appraisal Company, is closing. There are 19,545 parcels in Fluvanna.
- Treasurer Linda Lennher will provide supervisors with a monthly treasurer's report. "You will be getting in your Board package monthly a report that shows all the investment accounts, the balances in them, and any accrued interest that you earned off of them," said Nichols.
- Jason Smith, community and economic development director, presented an outline of a plan to promote tourism in the county. Specifics are still in the works but the plan has a defined vision: "Fluvanna County will be recognized as a viable travel and retreat destination that maintains its small town charm, unique heritage and natural beauty"

"There is no one, absolutely no one in...the Central Virginia region that pays less for business taxes than Fluvanna County businesses. No one...not even close."

Judge's comments: So very few words for your lead quickly drew me in. I was quite intrigued as if I were reading a suspenseful whodunit story. Controversy roils over proposed LGBTQ rainbow Fluco symbol

The community took a stand. The School Board did not. Scores of high school students and community members packed the auditorium Wednesday (Nov. 7) for the Fluvanna School Board meeting.

During public comments it became clear why they were there: Item "B" on the action agenda: "Approval of Alliance Club request to give out stickers to teachers displaying the Fluco 'F' in rainbow colors."

If they expected the board to act, they were disappointed. After the board listened for more than an hour to public comments, Chair Perrie Johnson (Pork Union) made a motion to approve the students' amended request.

Silence.

No one seconded. The motion died.

Despite having the request for a month, the board chose Wednesday to do more research and discuss it further with their lawyer.

Their questions centered around whether the school or the public owned the Fluco F logo trademark.

They will take up the request again in December's meeting.

During the second round of public comments, the community chided the board.

"Our all's decision was a cop out," said Ben Fick. "You're afraid to let the kids color in your logo. It's an F logo with wings on it and you're all like 'I don't know what to do. I don't know what to do. It's a cop out.'"

The Alliance Club is a student-led group supporting gay, bisexual, transgender students and their allies.

Originally they asked after the logo and give out rainbow F to any teacher identified as a "safe sp."

Before Wednesday's meeting the group amended its request to ask about district teachers. Teachers can't give out stickers in the class

Even after a month of study, the Fluvanna School Board still isn't any closer to an answer about allowing the Alliance Club to rainbow-color the Fluco logo.

Rainbow Fluco leak Will we ever know who is responsible?

BY RUTHANN CARR

Find the leak. That seemed to be the single concern connecting those for and against the Fluvanna County High School Alliance Club's request to rainbow-ize the Fluco logo.

Everyone wanted to know how blogger and radio host Rob Schilling got hold of the Alliance Club letter that Superintendent Chuck Winkler presented to the School Board in an Oct. 10 closed session.

Bearing Drift, which bills itself as "Virginia's conservative voice" ran a Schilling blog post the letter to the board. The name and email address of the student making the request were blurred, but not the name of a supporting teacher.

How did Schilling know about the Alliance Club request before it was even on the Nov. 7 School Board agenda?

Lots of people

Four people who were among the first to know of the club's formal request to the administration - Winkler and three School Board members, Chair Perrie Johnson (Pork Union), Charles Rittenhouse (Cunningham) and Andrew Pullen (Columbia) - have all said, "I hear a lot of people had that letter."

to create a rainbow F logo for the group to use to "encourage a safe, accepting space in our school." Originally the group wanted to offer stickers to teachers and staff to display in their room as a "safe space" for LGBTQ students.

Somehow Rob Schilling, a radio host and blogger for the conservative Bearing Drift website, got hold of a color picture of the formal request letter. On Nov. 2, five days before the request was brought before the public in an open meeting, Schilling posted a column entitled "The culture wars come to Fluvanna."

By the time the issue was addressed in the November meeting, the Alliance Club amended the request to say they would not offer stickers made with the revised logo to teachers and would not use it to make money.

Many parents and other community members spoke their mind during the November meeting public comments. Of those who spoke, about one-quarter was against the logo change.

The one unifying issue between both sides seemed to be anger at who passed

Michael Townsend went to his gun safe and retrieved a shotgun. Standing on his deck, he fired two shots in the air, yelling, "Joe, you'd better stop!"

Testimony

Each of Blowe's co-conspirators testified to his role in crime.

"We were going there to steal some stuff," Jackson said. "There were supposed to be some guns out there."

Jackson explained he had learned about the guns kept in a safe in the apartment above the garage from Givens, an acquaintance of the apartment's former occupant. Jackson then told Abbit, a longtime friend who lived in Virginia Beach.

Abbit testified that Blowe had overheard some of his phone conversations with Jackson and decided to join him in the robbery.

As Abbit awaited a ride from Charlottesville, someone called in a report of a suspicious person. A deputy arrived and began questioning Abbit, briefly putting him in handcuffs. But after confirming with the cashier Abbit's story that he had been dropped off by a law enforcement officer, the deputy let him go.

Abbit made his way home to Virginia Beach, where he was arrested two days later.

Evidence

Boasting the state's case, Commonwealth's Attorney Jeff Haislip introduced forensic evidence showing Blowe's movements on the day of the crime and tying him to a weapon used in the shooting.

THIS WEEK'S PET

My name is Kaiju

I was originally born in Japan! I moved here to America with My family. My family is in the service so we had to move a lot, moving caused me to have anxiety and I started to pull my hair out every time we moved. My family then discussed with my Vet what would be the best thing for me because they didn't want me to go through this any more. The Vet recommended that they surrender me to a local shelter to be adopted out to another family so that I would not have to move again. It was very sad for me at first, but I know now that my family did what was best for me. I am coming around not hiding any more and wanting attention. I am very loving and I love affection. "I am FIV Positive so I would need to be an indoor kitty only." I need to be with a family that is settled in their home and they are not planning on moving. I am current on all shots, micro-chipped and Neutered.

Teaching elementary music a joyful experience

SUBMITTED BY DARRELL BAUGHAN

I am the music teacher at Central Elementary and West Central Elementary. I live at Lake Monticello with my beautiful wife and three cats. As I finish out my 30th year as a teacher with Fluvanna County schools, I want to share some of my thoughts and precious memories of the amazing years that I have been a proud Fluco educator.

I was born in Richmond. I attended schools in Henrico County where my love of music started. I fell in love with music in the fourth grade. One day in music class, our music teacher asked the class to listen to a recording of a musical story titled Peter and the Wolf. The teacher displayed seven posters of different musical instruments. As we listened to the music, we were asked to match the instruments we were hearing with the poster that represented each instrument. As I sat at my desk that day, I fell in love with music.

As I grew older, my parents bought me a trumpet and I slowly learned to play. In high school, marching band was my life. Being able to be outside on a large field and blow that trumpet was like being in heaven for me.

I attended Virginia Commonwealth University and studied music education. I became a member of Phi Mu Alpha, a professional music fraternity that fosters and encourages education and love of music.

I originally dreamed of being a professional trumpet player. I wanted to travel and be the best trumpeter in the world. I realized in college that although I was a very good trumpet player, there were many others who were better. I always had a love for music and children, so I was encouraged to become a music teacher.

I was hired in 1988 to teach elementary music, fifth grade chorus and fifth grade band at Central Elementary School. At first I remember being overwhelmed by my music schedule and being the director of not only music classes, but band and chorus as well. I taught fifth grade band for the first 23 years of my teaching experience. I had to teach band after school due to the busy schedules during the school day. It was a delight seeing the young children progress during the school year as they began to make better sounds on their musical instruments and learned to sing many songs from their hearts.

I will always remember the fifth grade band performing Space Shuttle Rock for their parents on stage at the end of the school year. We used an old drum set and the trumpet players stood up as they played. I was so proud of those students and it was so much fun.

I now teach kindergarten, first and second grade music classes at West Central and Central Elementary. I absolutely love my job. In music class, the children enjoy a variety of experiences. They love to sing and dance; learn about different musical instruments, rhythms and musical notations; listen to different styles of music; and appreciate and engage in the musical world.

Music should be enjoyable and fun. Some of my best memories of my younger school days revolve around music. Music makes our world a better place. Music can be used to learn many other subjects in school. In music class this year, the second graders have learned the names and capitals of all 50 states as well as the names of the seven continents of the world and many of the places located within each continent. It is wonderful to see the look of excitement on the children's faces when they want to learn different subjects taught in school with the help of a catchy song.

I have been blessed to work with some of the best teachers on earth here in Flu-vanna County. One thing I love the most about teaching in Fluvanna is that my coworkers are also my family. We share a common love of children and education and strive every single day to make a positive difference in the lives of all of our students. I am grateful to Amy Barnabei and Clint Estes for being the best school principals any school could have. They love and care about the children in our school just as if they were their own children. Our children and staff are lucky to have them in our school system.

The past 30 years have gone by so fast for me. I can still remember that first back to school meeting we had in the cafeteria of the old high school. There were so many people I did not know and I was so intimidated. After an hour I began to feel right at home with my new Fluco friends. I am so grateful for all the love and encouragement the Fluvanna staff has given me over the years.

I am excited about our kindergarten spring concert. We have a total of 12 kindergarten classes at West Central Elementary. Kindergarten classes from Pod 1 will be performing in our school's auditorium Tuesday (April 16) at 6:30 p.m. Kindergarten classes from Pod 2 will be performing Wednesday (April 17) at 6:30 p.m.

The children have been working hard memorizing the words to all their songs. The concert is open to the public and you will be in for a treat when you hear them sing. Two of their songs will be from popular movies and one song will be sung in sign language.

We hope we see you at our spring kindergarten concert.
