Cover Story

A Saturday in Buckingham

By Sue A. Miles Correspondent very now and then the Beacon takes a Saturday ride around the country to see what the citizens of the county are doing over the weekend. With the hot summer days, many people are out and about - shopping, volunteering, spending time with their family and basically enjoying the various activities and events taking place in Buckingham. Come along as we meander throughout the county to see what folks are up to.

Coming all the way from Ontario, Canada this group of leather-bound bikers are shown taking a break at Dillwyn Food Mart before heading north on highway 15. The Sport Touring group comes down every year to explore the Virginia highways. Their bike tour takes them 500 miles throughout Virginia with their focus on the Staunton and Luray area. This is their sixth year of touring and they could not say enough about the scenic highways of Virginia.

Posed against the historic Buckingham Court House, Susie Beiler (left) and Barbie Stoltzfus, take a break from their biking exhibition. The girls, who are from Pennsylvania, were visiting relatives in Whorley Town. Because a workday was taking place at their relatives, the two girls were heading to a local store to buy some supplies to add to the lunch preparation.

Most all weekends are busy at Sprouse's Corner Ranch. On this particular Saturday, the annual regional 4-H Horse Show was taking place. Attended by horse enthusiasts from all over the area, 13-year-old Cheyenne Robinson, is shown with Wonderley Pomp, "Mr. P" and her family, all hailing from the Keysville area. Mr. P was awarded champion of the event. The ribbons on Ella Robinson (left) are those that the gallant horse won on that day. Jerry Ownby is shown power washing his 24 and $\frac{1}{2}$ foot Shamrock. Ownby and his family were getting ready to head to the Bay area to fish, take in the sun, and to simply relax. They expected to spend most of the Fourth of July weekend at the ocean. Lucky them!

Travelling through the highways of Buckingham offers drivers many scenic sites. Sandra Ownby offers drivers a very interesting sight due to her extra effort to combine the beauty of summer plants with old jeans and boots. This gardening display, a true concept of recycling, was quite a site and one worth stopping for a picture. Nothing like a summer weekend to celebrate family by joining together for a reunion. The Perkins-Brown family gathered at Ellis Acres Memorial Park to honor Mollie Perkins, the family matriarch, who was famous for cooking for the workers at Buckingham Court House, over 100 years ago. The Perkins-Brown family, who have been meeting every two years since 1990, traveled from Maryland, New Jersey, Fredericksburg, Norfolk, Georgia and Pennsylvania to enjoy a weekend together with their Buckingham relatives. Shown left to right are: Lucinda Saulisbury, Yvonne Spencer, Dalliz'e Marshall, Mary Moore, Taniya Jones, Loveleen Perkins, J.D. Perkins. Rear: Lawrence Miles, Bevnardine Miles, and Doug Hewlett.

Every Saturday, during the summer, Buckingham shoppers from around the area gather in front of Reid's Market to pursue through the many offerings of the county flea market. Susie Leonard Blankenship (left) checked out the dolls that Diane Whorley is offering while Linda Palmore (rear) and Alice Palmore (right) also checked out the merchandise.

During warm weather you can usually find a fundraising car wash being offered. This one, sponsored by Buck Town Car Club, was raising money for cancer patients. Latriva Glover (left) is shown assisting Tyrone Anderson, and Franklin "Pepe" Glover in their efforts to clean up a customer's car while doing good for the community.

Buckingham residents are ever so grateful to have Sunnyside Farms offer an abundance of fresh, farm raised fruits and vegetables along the highway 15 coordinator, near Food Lion. Kenneth Gentry (right) welcomes customers such as Bob Jefferson (left) who come by to glean the tasty produce offered during the summer months.

No summer weekend would be complete without a youth league ball game at Gene Dixon Memorial Park. On this particular night, the games taking place were part of the minors and majors district all-star tournament, which Buckingham hosted. The young batter at the plate was part of a team that beat Amelia 11- 3.

Although it was not Sunday, these church members, representing a multitude of churches throughout the area, were meeting to discuss countywide church activities. The meeting, which took place at Chief Cornerstone Baptist Church on Bell Road, has been taking place every month for over 100 years. Left to right: Rev. Paul Johnson, Kevin Booker, Richard Austin, Joyce Booker, Rev. Calvin Booker, and Annie Lee.

Some people take the opportunity during a weekend to give back to their community. The Farmville Area Habitat for Humanity volunteer group meet on Camden Street in Dillwyn to work on the foundation of a new house in the process of being built. Volunteers Don Williams, Danielle, Ryan Mast (of Americorps) and Chris Yates are shown working on part of the foundation of the new home being built. If you're interested in volunteering for this very worthy project contact the area office at 434-394-3001.

Buckingham County Obituaries

In the 19th century, news of Buckingham County reached regional and city newspapers via correspondence. As a result, obituaries might be bundled, sometimes without specific dates. Such was the case in the autumn of 1837. Following an unusually lengthy obituary for the esteemed Archibald Austin, Esq., Richmond's Enquirer printed several obituaries from Buckingham County. Given the loss of Buckingham County death records prior to 1869, these obituaries are particularly valuable. The list began:

— Also, Thomas May, proprietor of the Manor at our Court-house—an honest, worthy man, of kind and social feelings, his lady having deceased about three years before him. He has left an amiable family of sons and daughters to mourn their great bereavement.

Thomas May was remembered by the Town of Maysville (a.k.a. Buckingham Court House), which was established in 1818. May's death notice was followed by one for William Lewis:

—Also, William Lewis, an honest man by nature and practice—pure amongst the purest; eminently gifted with virtuous, kind and social feelings [towards] his family, to his neighbors and toward all mankind. He has left an amiable wife and several daughters to mourn their irreparable loss.

This notice was of particular interest to me, as William Lewis was briefly fatherin-law to my ancestor John M. Harris. Lewis died in September of 1837 at White Sulphur Springs, Virginia. Presumably, he had gone in hopes of restoring his health. His wife, Ann "Nancy" (Tindall), survived only until May 27, 1838. Their daughter, Mary Tindall Lewis, who had cared for both parents, married my widowed ancestor in Buckingham County on October 5, 1842. A shock to all, Mary was dead by June 10, 1843.

— Also, Capt. Robert Hill, a resident of our Court house; the gentleman a very fine character, of amiable and bland disposition, courteous manners, and generally much esteemed by his acquaintances. He has left a young and amiable widow to lament her early deprivation.

– Also, Lion E. Hooper, merchant, of Curdsville, in the prime of life, of breast affection. Mr. Hooper was much esteemed, and deservedly so, through the circle of his acquaintance, as an upright, just man, of fair prospects, but nipped by untimely death. He has left an amiable widow and several young children to bewail their great loss.

—Also, George Carter, a deserving, valuable man, in the prime of life, with a scrofulous disease, leaving a young widow to lament her heavy bereavement.

In the 19th century, scrofulous, a specific form of tuberculosis, was particularly prevalent among slaves in Buckingham County, however, it affected the entire population.

On January 5, 1899, the Appomattox and Buckingham Times printed this report from Ransons' correspondent "Artificer":

Editor Times – A shocking accident occurred on the farm of Mr. Samuel D. Holman, a few miles from this place last Friday afternoon, when George, the 14-year old son of Mr. Holman, accidentally shot and instantly killed his cousin, Sammy Loving, about the same age.

The two boys had been hunting together all day, and in the afternoon came home for dinner, and afterwards started to get to Mr. Connor's store, at Eldridge's Mill. They had not gone far from the house when Sammy Loving said to George Holman, "You hold my gun while I run back and get my rabbit skins to sell Mr. Connor." George says he reached out to take Sammy's gun, and just then his own gun, which he held under his arm, went off in some way he does not know how, the load entered the boy's head, tearing away the whole top and scattering his brain on the ground and fence which was near the boy. He died instantly, George dropped his gun and ran back to the house almost scared to death, not knowing the boy was dead.

An inquest was held Saturday, and the jury returned a verdict of accidental killing. The burial took place Saturday afternoon at Mr. Holman's.

The deceased was the oldest son of Mrs. Mary Loving and a nephew of Mr. Sam Holman.

It will be remembered by the readers of the TIMES that only a few weeks ago, on the same place, Ansell Newton, a boy about 15 years old who also lived at Mr. Holman's, was found dead in the woods near home, having been shot and killed by someone unknown. He had been hunting during the day with a youth, Willie Jamison, and not coming home at night friends went to look for him. Not finding him at the Jamison home, they became alarmed and looked for him all night and until noon the next day, when they found his body in the woods.

The Jamison boy was arrested and placed in jail, but was afterwards released on bail, and will be tried by the grand jury next court. It is believed by most people that Newton was accidentally killed by the Jamison boy, and that he was afraid to tell it.

It is remarkable that two boys of about the same age, both living on the same farm, should be killed in the same manner so near the same time. At the time the Newton boy was killed George Holman was in school at Well Water.

The sad death of young Loving has cast a gloom over the entire community, who deeply sympathize with the sorrowing mother in her sore affliction.

Community Builders Award

By Martha Louis, Correspondent

The American Red Cross makes a visit to our county lots of times during the year. In past years , the Buckingham Ruritans sponsored the blood drive. This role has now been passed on to Buckingham Masonic Lodge #242 who helps staff the bloodmobile and publicize the drive. During the summer there is an extra request for blood. On one such visit on July 17th at First Baptist Church, everyone took time out to recognize a very special person who has donated her time over the years to this worthy mission. On behalf of the Buckingham Masonic Lodge #242, Spencer Adams presented the "Community Builder's Award" to Zanie Huddleston Jamerson. The award reads "in recognition of outstanding service to community, this award given and heartfelt gratitude is expressed for the significant efforts toward making the community a better place in which to live."

For 15 years, Zanie Jamerson has been the smiling face that registers the donors when the American Red Cross is in town.

When asked why she chose the bloodmobile as a place to serve her county, she said it was the least she could do, since , Zanie cannot donate blood. Zanie also was a very active member of the Buckingham Woman's Club, serving as President for 2 years. She served as Treasurer for the Friends of the Library for 10 years and is a long time member of Salem United Methodist Church. Zanie is truly reflection of the best of Buckingham County. Congratulations on this well deserved award.

Rabies Vaccinations for Pets Important

The Buckingham County Animal Control and Health Departments urge all pet owners to have their pets vaccinated for rabies. During the summer, we spend more time outdoors and are more likely to have contact with animals, both wild and domestic. This also means we are at an increased risk of exposure to rabies. Rabies is a deadly viral disease that can be transmitted from infected wildlife to domestic animals and people. Wild animals in Virginia at high risk of being rabid include bats, raccoons, foxes and skunks; however, any mammal can get rabies.

Whenever there is a concern about possible rabies exposure to a person or domestic animal, the local Health Department investigates to determine whether the risk of rabies warrants post-exposure vaccination or other control measures. Animal Control and the Health Department investigate a large number of bite reports involving unvaccinated dogs; and numerous reports of unvaccinated dogs or cats that have had contact with high-risk wild animals.

Vaccinating your pets against rabies establishes a barrier between wildlife and people; failure to do so weakens this barrier and increases the risk of exposure. Vaccinating your pet means that you are protecting yourself, your family, neighbors, groomers, veterinary staff, delivery persons and anyone else who comes in contact with your pet from the possibility of rabies.

RABIES VACCINATION

Rabies vaccinations are extremely important for both indoor and outdoor pets. Below are the top five reasons to vaccinate your pets for rabies and to keep them up-to-date.

1. If your unvaccinated dog, cat, or ferret has contact with an animal presumed to have rabies, Animal Control and the Health Department have the right to quarantine them in strict isolation with no contact to humans or other animals for up to 6 months.

2. If your unvaccinated pet bites a human or another animal, they will need to be confined and observed for 10 days. If they show any signs of rabies, they must be euthanized and be tested for rabies. This test can only be performed postmortem because it requires samples of brain tissue.

3. A rabies infected animal could come into your home unwanted. Bats are the most common cause of rabies in the United States. They can get into the house through windows, screens, chimneys, etc. Because of the significant health threat, the Health Department takes any reports of bats in the home seriously.

4. An indoor pet could escape from home some time during their life. If they did, they could come in contact with a rabid animal (bat, raccoon, skunk, fox, etc).

5. Last, but not least, rabies vaccinations are required by law in the state of Virginia for all dogs, cats, and ferrets over 4 months old.

In summary, a rabies vaccination is necessary for all pets and the consequences of not having your pet vaccinated are not worth the risks. Please have your pets vaccinated and keep them current.
