James River Water Project denied permit

Water Authority “unequivocally disagrees” archaeologist wasn’t qualified to survey site

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

The James River Water Authority is pushing back against a surprise decision by the Virginia Department of Historic Resources (VDHR) and the Army Corps of Engineers (ACOE) to disqualify work done by the archaeologist who surveyed the proposed site on the James River at Point of Fork near Columbia.

Many believe that the facility would sit atop the remains of Rassewek, the historical capital of the Monacan tribe.

The decision came in a Sept. 6 letter from VDHR Director Julie Langan to Fluvanna County Administrator Eric Dahl.

Langan wrote that although Carol Tyrer of Circa~ Cultural Resource Management has performed hundreds of site surveys over the last several decades, it was recently brought to VDHR’s attention that she lacked the academic background to meet “the Professional Qualifications Standards for Archaeology, which are the minimum requirements that must be met under the Virginia Administrative Code.

“The failure of the archaeological consultant to meet the above requirements renders the information previously provided regarding the scope of the permit application and associated plans unreliable,” she concluded.

Langan said VDHR was denying the permit application for the archaeological excavation of human remains, and for the permitting process to move forward, because “the existing research design and data recovery plan must be reviewed and revised by a qualified archaeological consultant to meet both the Department’s standards and the approval of the Monacan Indian Nation (Monacan), who are directly affected by this project.”

“We understand that you wish to move forward with permitting as expeditiously as possible,” Langan concluded, “and we hope that you also understand our great caution given the importance of this land area to Virginia’s federally-recognized tribes as this area contains multiple archaeological sites likely associated with Rassewek, the ancestral capital of the Monacan.”

This letter was followed by another from William Walker, chief of the Regulatory Branch of the ACOE. The VDHR’s decision on Tyrer’s qualifications meant that they, too, have to re-evaluate the project, and Walker said the way to do that was through “the standard individual permit process.”

This is potentially a larger problem than the lack of a re-burial permit. JRWA is petitioning for a Nationwide permit, which are given out for relatively uncomplicated projects. Standard Individual Permits are, ac-ording to the department’s website, “more complex in nature” involving public hearings and the participation of commenting agencies. JRWA called a meeting on Tuesday (Sept 17) at Spring Creek near Zion Crossroads. After a lengthy closed session, they approved GAI Consultants, an engineering firm with offices in Glen Allen, to review Tyrer’s work.

Members also approved a seven-page letter to VDHR, arguing that the agency had essentially blindsided the Authority by not letting them know there were problems with Tyrer’s credentials and allowing them to respond before the decision to deny the permit was made.

The JRWA “unequivocally disagrees” with VDHR’s argument that Tyrer didn’t meet the minimum standards for an archaeologist, pointing to her 35 years in business and over 700 published papers and technical reports.

They also object to Langon's insistence that they include the Monacan tribe in the research design and data recovery plan. "The assertion that the project "directly affects" the Monacans is factually wrong. The project is wholly situated on private—non-tribal—property."

"[The] Monacans have stated publicly that they will not agree to any research design or data recovery plan for the site," they continued. "In light of the Monacans well-publicized statements about the project, we read your letter as effectively granting the Monacans a veto power over the project."

The James River Water Project is a multimillion-dollar joint venture between Louisa and Fluvanna counties to carry over 6 million gallons of James River water per day to Zion Crossroads and other parts of Louisa County. It is a vital part of the development plan for the region,

For the moment, all parties seem to be at an impasse.

It's not clear where things go from here, but during public comments, Louisa resident and retired attorney Angelo Lomascolo suggested that the agency letters were a message to the Authority: "They're tired of this."

Board approves bond issue for Albemarle-based soccer organization

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

The Fluvanna Board of Supervisors voted to approve a bond issuance of up to $3.75 million for the Albemarle-based soccer organization SOCA at the regular meeting on Wednesday (Sept. 18).

County Administrator Eric Dahl outlined the history and scope of the request, which, he stressed, involves no outlay of funds from Fluvanna County. The Economic Development Authority only acts as a conduit between the banks and SOCA.

"I may have a conflict of interest, as SOCA is a client of mine," Supervisor Tony O'Brien said after Dahl completed his overview.

After listening to O'Brien's explanation of his firm's involvement with the organization, County Attorney Fred Payne said, "it seems to me it would be prudent for you not to participate," although he said O'Brien did not need to leave the room during the discussion.

Chair Mike Sheridan, a firefighter with the Kent's Store Volunteer Fire Company, was delayed by a house fire, arriving in the middle of the discussion. Supervisor Mozell Booker was away for the week.

VIRGINIA CODE § 56-604 AND TO IMPLEMENT A 2020
SAVE PLAN INFRASTRUCTURE RELIABILITY AND REPLACEMENT ADJUSTMENT IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 20 OF ITS GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS
CASE NO. PUR-2019-00132

On August 15, 2019, Columbia Gas of Virginia, Inc. ("CVA" or "Company"), filed with the State Corporation Commission ("Commission") an application for approval to amend Phase 2 of its SAVE Plan pursuant to the Steps to Advance Virginia's Energy Plan (SAVE) Act, Chapter 26 of Title 56 of the Code of Virginia and for approval to implement a 2018 Infrastructure Reliability and Replacement Adjustment ("IRRA") ("Application").

In its Application, the Company requests approval to increase the annual investment cap from $30 million to $50 million for calendar year 2020 and increase the total five-year (2016-2020) cap on authorized Phase 2 SAVE Plan expenditures from $173.8 million to $193.8 million. According to the Company, it is proposing the increases in these caps to (1) accelerate the replacement of bare steel pipelines, (2) accommodate necessary large scale pipeline replacement projects, and (3) address additional costs related to more refined work plans and cost projections. CVA is not proposing to modify the operational aspects of its current SAVE Plan or the authorized categories of SAVE eligible infrastructure. The Company is not proposing any change to the currently authorized tolerance band of 5% applicable to total SAVE expenditures or the associated annual tolerance band of 25% approved by the Commission in Case No. PUE-2015-00071. Additionally, the Company is not proposing any changes to the provision of Section 20 of the Company's General Terms and Conditions.

In its Application, the Company seeks approval of the following: (1) the Company's 2018 Infrastructure Replacement Reconciliation Rate ("IRRR") credit in the amount of $91,890; (2) the Company's 2020 Infrastructure Replacement Current Rate ("IRCR") in the amount of $6,203,644; and (3) the filing of rate sheets implementing the 2020 IRCR and 2018 IRRR. The 2020 IRCR and the 2018 IRRR result in an IRRA total net charge to customers of $6,111,753 for 2020. The Company requests that the 2020 IRRA be effective with the first billing unit of January 2020 through the last billing unit of December 2020. The Company's 2020 IRRA proposed monthly rates by rate schedule are as follows: Residential Sales Service / Residential Transportation Service, $1.50; Small General Service 1 / Small General Transportation Service 1, $1.47; Small General Service 2 / Small General Transportation Service 2, $4.11; Small General Service 3 / Small General Transportation Service 3, $13.76; Large General Service 1 / Transportation Service 1, $132.64; and Large General Service 2 / Transportation Service 2, $704.28. Additionally, the Company requests to be relieved from the submission of certain quarterly reports to the Commission's Division of Utility and Railroad Safety.

The Commission entered an Order for Notice and Comment and a Correcting Order that, among other things, directed the Company to provide notice to the public and provided interested persons an opportunity to comment on the Company's Application.

Treasurer forum packed

On the evening of Sept. 16, I was once again reminded that Fluvanna County is a great place to live, work, play and raise a family. The Fluvanna Chamber of Commerce hosted a candidate's forum for the only contested local position in the upcoming November elections; the treasurer. All three of the candidates, incumbent Linda Lenherr and challengers Kim Hyland and Ben Hudson, attended and did their best to explain to the gathered citizens, why they should be the one Fluvanna residents should vote for on Nov. 5. They answered of questions that citizens and businesses had submitted and that the Chamber Board chose.

I want to thank them for their willingness to engage in the political process and more importantly for their participation in the

The Chamber was expecting a decent turnout. We were pleasantly surprised when we realized that the county citizens were so engaged. The auditorium at the old Palmyra Elementary School, better known as the school board meeting room, was completely filled. There was literally not a vacant seat in the room. In fact, we had to bring in about a dozen folding chairs to accommodate the attendees.

I want to thank all the county residents who gave of their time on a Monday evening in order to educate themselves on the choices available for the position of treasurer. I was humbled to see such a great turnout. I'd also like to thank the school board staff for their support and especially John who was so instrumental in making sure we had everything we needed to have a great event. Finally, I want to thank the Board and staff of the Fluvanna Chamber of Commerce for their help in promoting and presenting this event.

I am looking forward to seeing another great turnout on Oct. 21 when the Fluvanna Chamber holds the next candidate's forum with the intention of connecting our residents with the candidates for the two state delegate's seat and the senatorial seat that will be on the ballot on Nov. 5. -- Rudy Garcia, President, Fluvanna Chamber of Commerce

Pro-child, not pro-gun

(Editor's note: This letter is in response to letters written by John Neighbours and George Coussoulos in the Sept. 12 issue)

It is clear that neither Messr. Neighbours nor Coussoulos read and understood the letter I wrote -- published on Sept. 5 -- as to why we need to keep a Republican majority in the General Assembly in 2019. It was not a pro-gun letter. It was a pro-child letter. Mr. Neighbours somehow thought it was time to remind us he had been in Vietnam. Hooray and with all seriousness thank you for your service. And Mr. Coussoulos could not help but get sidetracked with a disconnected discussion that included, among all things, comments about the Aug. 12, 2017 incident in Charlottesville, where an automobile was used as a weapon. I guess it was an AR-Chevrolet.

Gentlemen, the issue is very simple. Many more human beings will die as a result of allowing more leniency regarding third-trimester abortions and infanticide in Virginia than will be saved as a result of more gun controls and if the Democrats gain control, they will pass laws that lead to more abortions and infanticide. That's the premise, no need to wander around trying to impress with war stories or discussions of Supreme Court rulings.

I find it interesting that neither Coussoulos nor Neighbours even tried to dispute that reality; that more abortions mean more deaths. They seem comfortable with the fact that if Democrats gain control of the General Assembly they will pass abortion laws that allow killing of an infant right up to the moment of birth and infanticide, both of which are now illegal. A full explanation of Virginia's coming bill; should the Democrats gain control, can be found online, with Vermont also being a harbinger of what's to come from other states.

Republican control of the General Assembly is essential. Vote accordingly. It is the only thing that keeps us from further descent down the slippery slope of barbarism.

Robert Harris, Palmyra

No citizens spoke during the public hearing, but Supervisor Trish Eager questioned SOCA Executive Director Matt Wilson on how many children from Fluvanna play for SOCA's travel team, the costs of membership, and the structure of local soccer leagues.

Wilson said Fluvanna players were eligible for the same need-based scholarships as Albemarle players, and that, while they were occasionally rivals on the field, he felt Fluvanna's league and SOCA were "colleagues" off the field.

The motion to approve the Economic Development Authority's inducement resolution passed 3-0, with O'Brien abstaining and Booker absent.

Later in the session, the supervisors requested that Parks and Recreation Director Aaron Spitzer give a presentation in the coming weeks on how the county might improve the fields for soccer practice at Pleasant Grove.

various color choices, including among them "Heavenly Blue," "Baby Blue," "Robin's Egg Blue," white, tan, and even a bold navy blue.

"I think it's nice when the tower fits in with the sky," said Eager. Sheridan concurred the blues were nice.

More of the discussion focused on the logo. Dahl was looking towards using one of the several different logos currently in use by county departments in their literature, but supervisors wondered if they should involve local students for the community in the process.

"We have this thing called 'My Two Cents,'" Sheridan told the audience, referring to the online suggestion box on the county website. "If you have any ideas, you can either approach one of us or send it to My Two Cents."

The cost of painting the tower is built into the construction contract, but the logo is likely to cost $15,000 to $30,000 per side, depending on the complexity of the design.

Evidence

Supervisors also approved a budget transfer of $28,500 from the contingency fund to the sheriff's office for the completion of their evidence storage building. Having outgrown the small evidence room inside the sheriff's office, in 2018 they purchased a large CONEX box and have been outfitting it for use.

Among other items, the funding will allow the purchase of an evidence refrigerator, security cameras, a Hazmat storage box, and a drying cabinet, all of which are needed for the proper storage of evidence.

The request passed 3-0.

What color is your water tower?

Supervisors also debated a bit of what may be called "exterior decorating."

With the water tower project at Zion Crossroads progressing on schedule, Dahl said it was time to start thinking about colors and logo designs.

"We pretty much have to give our contractors some information by the end of October," said Dahl.

He showed the supervisors computer-generated images with

Spotlight is on vegetarianism

So, what's with all this attention to vegetarianism? Most the dire warnings about the coming climate catastrophes mention why cutting back on our consumption of meat would be good for planet Earth. It would lower our consumption of fresh water--now a scare resource for millions of people == and help slow the destruction of the Amazon rainforest.

Perhaps we should be reminded that the promotion of a vegetarian diet goes back to the Greek historian Plutarch (c. AD 46 - c. 120). His quotes on the subject are numerous including, "I rather wonder both by what accident and in what state of soul or mind the first man touched his mouth to gore and brought his lips to the flesh of a dead creature, he who set forth tables of dead, stale bodies and ventured to call food and nourishment the parts that had a little before bellowed and cried, moved and lived. How could his eyes endure the slaughter when throats were slit and hides flayed and limbs torn from limb? How could his nose endure the stench?"

"As long as there are slaughterhouses, there will be battlefields" was written by Leo Tolstoy, but is reinforced by Socrates who was a vegetarian and taught that virtue is based on knowledge. Also of note, Einstein was a strict vegetarian but only for the last year of his life. The current issue of the Fluvanna Review mentions both the vegetarian and vegan diet. And let us all take note of a new item for sale at our recently revamped Food Lion. The store now sells Twin Oaks tofu. This organic product is made locally in Louisa County by a worker-owned cooperative.

While tofu is made from only the curds of soybeans it is a complete food source (containing the nine essential amino acids the body needs to build essential proteins). Provided they include a variety of vegetables and grains, vegetarians don't have to worry about their protein intake.

Candidates for treasurer's office speak to standing-room only crowd

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

A forum featuring three candidates for this year's county treasurer's race drew a standing-room crowd to the Fluvanna Public School Administration building on Monday night (Sept 16).

Ben Hudson of Palmyra and Kim Oliver Hyland of Scottsville are each seeking to unseat long-time incumbent Linda H. Lenherr in November. Over the course of about two hours, they each answered detailed questions about their individual visions for the treasurer's office.

The contrast between candidates was obvious from their opening statements. Both Hudson and Hyland are relative newcomers to the county; both have lengthy resumes in business and education. Neither has held public office. By comparison, Lenherr, a Fluvanna native, started with the county in 1971 and has served as treasurer since 1984.

Both challengers presented themselves as agents of change.

Hudson said his first objective was to "bring about a greater transparency in the office," which would naturally lead to dialog with the staff and with the community at large. "Through that dialog, you'll find solutions that you might not have come up with otherwise."

He said his goal was to make the office a better place for all county residents. "I think I have the right sort of plan to accomplish that through effective transparency, communication, and accountability."

Hyland argued the need for staff training and certification, a thorough review of current procedures, and to increase the rate for the collection of delinquent taxes. "We have a good collection at this point, 96 percent—but that three percent will give us about $800,000 more," she said.

Hudson and Hyland stressed the need to modernize the office by offering online and credit card payment options, moving to a paperless system, using social media and other online communication to interact with the public, and reviewing the current investment strategies.

Lenherr, who hasn't faced a challenger in at least two decades, pushed back against the implied criticism of her tenure.

"I'm not quite sure we're in such bad financial shape," she said after one comment from Hyland.

"I don't have the choice of which computer system the county uses," she said at another point.

Lenherr also gave somewhat contradictory responses to Hyland's focus on training and certification. She insisted at one point that "my staff is educated; we're just not certified." At another point, she said, "I've not been offered any online training whatsoever." She also said that, with such a small staff, it was hard to give people time off for certification courses.

Instead, she focused on her experience and her close ties to the community. "I enjoy my job because I enjoy serving the people of Fluvanna County," she said in her opening statement. She later described herself as "a working treasurer" with an open-door policy and a desire to help delinquent and down-on-their-luck taxpayers come up with plans to meet their obligations. "I sometimes say I'm a psychiatrist," she joked.

This summer, Hyland made headlines when she accused Lenherr of violating election law after witnessing Lenherr and others carrying what looked like campaign-related materials into the county office building just before the Fourth of July.

Last month, Hyland showed the Fluvanna Review security videos released to her under the Freedom of Information Act. The videos appear to show Lenherr and others carrying boxes into the office building, then emerging in the hallway from her private office about four hours later, carrying armloads of beaded necklaces affixed with strips of paper.

Lenherr and Hyland both participated in Scottsville's Fourth of July parade, and Hyland showed the Review some of the necklaces Lenherr and her supporters tossed to the crowd. One still had a small 'Lenherr for Treasurer' tag still attached. Hyland noted that it was on the same type of blue paper used by Lenherr's office for some tax bills.

Under election law, incumbents are prohibited from using government offices for any campaign activities. Hyland has reported the incident to the Virginia State Police and the Attorney General.

Neither Hyland or Lenherr brought up the allegations during the forum and the structure of the event limited interactions between the three candidates. Moderator Bill Hitchcock from the Fork Union Military Academy read out the questions, which were submitted by community members.

When asked if they would retain the current staff, Hudson and Hyland indicated they weren't looking to clean house. Asked about increasing diversity, Hudson said that "I would seek that through recruitment," reaching out online and through the high school and local colleges and universities. Hyland said a strong education program "will naturally increase diversity," as employees gained training and moved into more advanced positions. "We need turnover," she said. "It's healthy."

In their closing comments, each candidate stressed their individual visions for the office.

Hudson said he wanted to create a streamlined and efficient office where citizens were treated with respect. "I want to see smiling, positive faces in the office, people who are sympathetic and empathetic to the people we serve."

Hyland talked about her drive and her willingness to "figure out what we don't know yet." She pointed out that financial processes had changed a lot in recent years, and that Fluvanna could "be state-of-the-art out here" and provide better service with a "well-educated staff and a well-educated treasurer."

"We've had a long, good run" with Mrs. Lenherr, she added in closing, but after 35 years, it was time for fresh eyes.

Lenherr had the last word. "I've served as your treasurer for about 35 years, and I know people think that's a long time," she said. "But the treasurer's office, it's a lot of work and a lot of responsibility, and you have to take on a lot of hard work."

"I've got that experience," she concluded. "I've got that commitment to each and every one of you, and I'm committed to retaining that public trust."

Memoir writing: one author's passion

BY PAGE H. GIFFORD
CORRESPONDENT

Sharon Harrigan never meant to write a memoir. She had just finished her MFA in creative writing and decided she needed a blog. She wasn't sure what to write about since she wasn't an expert in anything and began by writing about her life. A blog post about her father's death got so much response that she turned it into an essay.

"It got so much response that people told me it needed to grow into a book," said Harrigan, whose current book Playing with Dynamite: A Memoir, talks about her father, who blew off his hand with dynamite before she was born. As strange as that is, Harrigan's father, an intelligent man but troubled, died mysteriously when she was seven. This prompted her to search for answers regarding her father's death.

She began piecing the story together with family members, beginning with her mother, who told her everything she knew. Harrigan then set out to find out what even her mother didn't know and Harrigan wasn't sure she wanted to know but needed to find out. This was the emotional part of her journey.

From a technical perspective, she had a voluminous amount of material, sometimes repetitive and digressive, and turned it into a tight, cohesive narrative. She taped recorded interviews with her aunt and uncle that amounted to 300 double-spaced pages of transcripts. She believes this section alone was about 60 pages in the finished book and had to decide what to omit.

"I had to find the structure for the book, what kind of 'container' to put these stories in. I decided to make my present-time story (2012-2014) chronological and to allow the stories from the past to emerge naturally as they are triggered by things happening in the present," said Harrigan. "When I talk to my students about this kind of structure, I use the analogy of a clothesline. The present story is the line, and the past story is the clothes hanging from the line. Structurally, I also decided to allow the reader to discover things at the same time I discovered them, to follow me collecting clues, like in a detective story."

Since memoirs are all about memories, constructing them is challenging when trusting one's memories or that of others.

"I know people who have amazing memories—my brother, for instance, has a photographic memory. I am not one of those people. So remembering was hard for me. So hard, that my not remembering (and why I didn't remember) became part of the story," she said. "It was also hard to write the parts that didn't come from my memory, that is, the parts that came from interviews. There was a lot of talking, and I needed to figure out a way to break up that talking with action and with scenes."

Harrigan said the biggest challenge was emotional—the feeling that people were going to be mad at her.

"Asking difficult questions was scary, but I survived the experience. I was afraid of betraying people in my family by bringing up things that were not talked about, but the experience has brought us closer," she said. "I realized that in some ways my brain had been stuck at age 7, understanding death in the magical-thinking way children often do. Finding out the real story allowed me to get past that."

Harrigan said she went looking for her father but found her mother instead. She realized that her obsession with her father's mysterious and bizarre story had eclipsed her mother's presence in the story.

"She was the one who picks up the pieces, a single parent with three small grief-stricken children—she is the impressive one. I realized that we as a society are obsessed with the stories of big, powerful men, but it's the resilient and reliable women, women who sometimes think they're invisible—these are the fascinating stories that can teach us how to survive."

She admits that writing a memoir is hard—both emotionally and technically. She tells her students not to worry too much about the structure of their memoir while they're writing it.

"It's best to mine your memory and collect all the stories and scenes that are vivid and have dramatic, emotional resonance. Then, after you've amassed a lot of material, you can decide what to keep and what kind of structure your story needs to glue it all together."

An award-winning freelance writer, journalist, and editor, with a B.A. in English from Columbia and an MFA from Pacific University, she has been teaching memoir writing since 2012 and believes we all have a story to tell.

"We might not want to publish it or even show it to anyone else, but we all have lived through dramatic moments and survived them. (Memoir writer) Debra Gwartney says that the unwritten subtitle of every memoir is 'how I coped.' She also says that the plot of every memoir is 'the narrator changed,' who is usually the writer's younger self. The writing self, the older self knows more than that younger self did and uses that wisdom to analyze and reflect on what happened and what it meant."

"The most powerful memoirs are the ones that feel universal. We're reading about the specifics of one person's experience—and the more precise the details are, the more vivid it is—but we can see our own experiences reflected in theirs." She adds that a memoir as a genre sometimes gets criticized for being "self-absorbed," but doesn't think that's fair. "Good memoirs, like good novels, teach us something we didn't know about the world, about the human experience, about trauma perhaps, but also about love and joy and redemption. And good memoirs also have a compelling plot that keeps you turning the pages."

Harrigan gives some tips to would-be memoir writers.

"My advice is to start small. Write about an object or photo that has emotional meaning for you. Draw a picture of the house you grew up in. Close your eyes and imagine what it felt like to be in your favorite place, the place where you most felt like yourself. Imagine what it looked like, sounded like, smelled like. Allow yourself to inhabit that space again. Let the memories come. Invite them in."

Harrigan also adds for those who are serious about writing a memoir she suggests the following authors: Bill Roorbach's Writing Life Stories, Tristine Rainer's Your Life as Story, and Melanie Brooks' Writing Hard Stories. She recommends starting with Roorbach, which features lots of great exercises to help remember things and write scenes about them. Rainer's book helps with the next stage, finding a structure and polishing the work. Brooks' book is full of interviews with memoir writers about how they handled the emotional side of writing about traumatic events.

Sharon Harrigan will be the guest speaker at Friends of the Library monthly meeting on October 2, at 7 p.m. at the Fluvanna County Library.

Fluco documentary team travels to California for education symposium

BY MADELINE OTTEN

The state of Virginia is on the move to change education through their newest program Virginia is for Learners. And to help showcase this change, Fluvanna County High School (FCHS) students Sasha Federico and Jules Shephard are joining forces to document students throughout the state of Virginia and showcase other students' thoughts on the current education system and how it can change to better prepare them for life after high school.

This project was brought to the attention of FCHS teacher David Small, who was approached by Assistant Superintendent for Learning and previous superintendent of Fluvanna County Schools Gena Keller in February, and was asked to help document this project.

"I was not sure at first since I was used to filming high school football games, but after hearing Gena talk more about it, I thought, 'this is something new; a game changer for education,'" said Small. "Sasha and Jules not only stood out to me because of their skill set, but they both have great character, fortitude, and are inquisitive."

Virginia is For Learners is a new program for the state to train students K-12 to go deeper into the concept that the main goal of public education is to prepare students for success as adults in a changing world. These reforms are the first overhaul of Virginia's system in over 20 years. They will focus on measuring what matters, driving continuous school improvement, and ensuring that every Virginia graduate is life ready.

To help with funding for their trip, the FLUCO documentary team was invited to speak at the Fluvanna Rotary Club's meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 17. During the meeting, Shepard explained the video's purpose and Keller explained further about how something that was taught in a way 40 years ago might not apply to students today and their learning styles. The program is centering on a new set of expectations known as the 5 C's: critical thinking, creative thinking, communication, collaboration, and citizenship skills.

According to Virginia is for Learners website, "this approach will prepare every student with the content knowledge they need and the skills they need to apply it successfully after graduation."

Throughout this past year, Federico and Shephard, along with two other Flucos who graduated in 2019, have traveled around the state to different schools in order to capture more than just Fluvanna's story and opinions on education. This documentary will also showcase different, diverse areas within the state such as Loudon, Rockingham, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cumberland Counties, and more. It will also capture the mistakes made by the education system and give a voice to the students who want to help make a change.

"Students should not be judged by a test score," said Federico. "TV production has introduced me to my future career and classes that implement life skills can help other students find their future."

Other counties are already implementing post high school graduate classes into their curriculum. For example, While Fluvanna has nurse aid classes, Cumberland County Schools are exposing their students to internships. Federico and Shepherd explained to the Rotary club that in Cumberland County, employers are going to the high school in search of students to employ. Employers are directly telling them what they are already looking for in an employee. Cumberland additionally has a robotics class that has students working with virtual reality. Virginia is For Learners is trying to help bring classes and like skills classes like this to prepare students.

"These students are the future of America," said Keller. "This is the very first time I have been energized because it matters to every child."

As for standardized testing, that is not completely out of the picture. The program is not here to remove standardized testing but wants to incorporate capstones and senior projects to help measure and engage students.

The symposium is held in Palm Springs, California on October 21-31 where Federico and Shepherd will tell Virginia's story through the eyes of its students to the nation. This year's theme is "shining a light on the future of learning".

"Not only is this a great opportunity for the state, but also for Fluvanna County," said Keller. "It is an honor for Fluvanna and can help put us on the map for the right things."

After the symposium, Federico and Shepard will travel to Los Angeles as a treat with Small and Lauren Struzik, another FCHS teacher and chaperon, and visit locations within the city that work with TV production. Small has connections within Disney's PIXAR and ABC studios, where the group will get to experience a personal tour.

The 2019 annual Fluvanna Meals on Wheels yard sale surpassed its goal of raising $15,000 which will provide over 2,700 meals for our homebound neighbors in need.

This is all made possible by the donation of the Family Life Center at Effort Baptist Church. Not only has Effort Church donated the kitchen space over the last 11 years where meals are packed, but the church also provided the use of the Family Life Center each August for its annual sale that helps many other non-profits in the community as well.

There were over 80 volunteers who unloaded cars and sorted donations to prepare for the yard sale and then helped the days of the sale. More than 1,000 hours of volunteer time made this event a success.

Kathy Schumacher and Darlene Lyons started this event 11 years ago and their dedication has made the yard sale a huge success over the years. Schumacher collects items for an entire year and uses a week of her vacation during the sale. As employees of State Farm they are able to donate volunteer time and grant money to this charitable event. They had the support of State Farm employees, retirees and agent volunteers.

Field hockey comes to high school

BY DUNCAN NIXON
CORRESPONDENT

Some high schools in Central Virginia have been playing field hockey for several years. This year, Fluvanna County High School joined the club. On Tuesday, Sept. 17, the Flying Fluco girls' team hosted the Warriors of Western Albemarle. The Fluco team showed some athletic talent, but the sport requires skills that can only be developed over years of practice. The Fluco athletes have not had that kind of time to work at this new sport. It is not easy to stop a fast-moving ball with a stick with a curved end, while running full speed. Also, hitting the ball hard and keeping it on the ground is not as easy as it sounds.

Western Albemarle opened the scoring after three minutes of play, but the Fluvanna defense made some strong plays in the next few minutes and sophomore goalkeeper Jordon Drumheller had an excellent stop on a long hard shot. After seven minutes of play, the Warriors scored again. This time from close in after a scramble for the ball. Freshman midfielder Peyton Marshall showed some good speed for the Flucos with a down field run at the 15 minute mark. Drumheller followed with another good save on a shot that looked like it was going in. With 6:50 left in the first half, the Warriors made it 3-0 scoring from point blank range on a shot the goalie had no chance of stopping. The first half ended with the score at 3-0.

After 30 minutes of fast, hard action the halftime was only five minutes long and the athletes were back in action. In the second half, the Warriors continued to dominate, keeping the ball in Flucos end of the field virtually all the time. A fourth goal came at 23:39 and was followed closely by a fifth goal at 22:25. A sixth goal was scored from close range with 20:39 left in the half. When the clock reached 15 minutes remaining, the game was ended, by rule, due to the six goal lead.

The Warriors are not in their initial season of field hockey and it showed. The skill levels were not equal and the Warriors were able to score six goals in 45 minutes of play. Although the final score was lopsided, the Flucos showed some speed and some promise. Drumheller was strong and made several nice leg block saves that kept the score down. Junior team captains Elle Dudzik and Cassidy Wagner worked hard in midfield, as did sophomore midfielder Ava Amato.

After the game, Fluco Coach Saami Shaibani noted that his squad played with energy and enthusiasm, even though they are still in a learning mode. He was pleased with the play of Drumheller in goal and with the overall hard work of his young team. He pointed out that Fluvanna high, in its first season, has been able to field a full junior varsity and a full varsity squad, which really is a testament to the enthusiasm of the Fluvanna high student body. There are 17 athletes on the varsity squad. They are all juniors, sophomores and freshman. It is not surprising that there are no seniors on a team that is building, learning and looking to the future. There are also seventeen athletes on the junior varsity squad. All are sophomores, freshman and eighth graders.

The Flucos appear to be fortunate in that they have found a coach who has serious experience in playing field hockey, a game that has not been played very extensively in the United States until quite recently. Coach Shaibani reports that he played men's field hockey in England against "Olympic caliber players." Field hockey is a very popular sport for both men and women in Europe and on the Asian sub-continent.

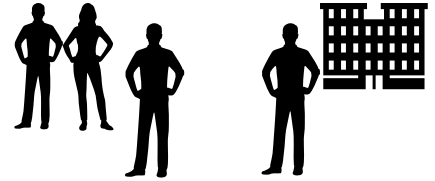

On Sept. 19, the Flucos played at Albemarle High and on the 24th they were at Louisa. On the 26th they will be playing at Orange County. They return home on Oct. 1 to host Monticello High.

Grace & Glory Lutheran Church Welcomes New Pastor

PRESS RELEASE

On Saturday September 28th Grace & Glory Lutheran Church in Palmyra will install Meredith Williams as its new pastor. Prior to coming to Grace & Glory, Pastor Williams was pastor at Ascension Lutheran Church in Danville for over 12 years. Pr. Williams received her Masters of Divinity degree from the Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary in Columbia, SC. Her first call was to Immanuel Lutheran church in Bluefield, W. Va. where she served for six years.

Pr. Williams places a high value on traditional Lutheran heritage, worship and order, and a strong music program. While open to exploring varying worship styles, she is passionate about traditional preaching, favoring a story-telling style, Bible study, teaching and community outreach.

Over 19 years as a pastor, Pr. Williams has worked with many community organizations. She loves being a pastor to a congregation that wants to grow closer to its community and that's what attracted her to Grace & Glory and its Feeding Fluvanna initiative. She hopes to develop and utilize ecumenical shared programs as well as community outreach efforts with other area churches.

Pr. Williams, her husband Carl, and their daughter Bekah reside in Palmyra. Their son Matthew attends George Mason University. Grace & Glory is located at 683 Thomas Jefferson Parkway in Palmyra. Worship services include a contemporary service at 8:30 a.m. followed by a traditional service at 10:30 a.m.
