Buckingham 3rd Grade Teacher Goes the Extra Mile

By Martha Louis
Correspondent

Each month the Scholastic Book Club magazine sends out order forms for books that can be ordered by students. The forms go home with the students, but some families are not able to afford the books. Denise Gormus Bryant has been helping students by providing her students with a new book each month of the school year. Denise feels that reading is SO important and she wants to continue to foster the love of books and reading to all her 3rd graders. She knows that the ability to read can make or break a student's academic career and then can shape their future career paths as well. Denise has a goal of a new book for each student every month at no cost to their parents.

Last year Denise was able to purchase 1,995 books thanks to the generous donors in the Buckingham community and beyond. Denise says that if she receives more than 42 donors, she will use the donations to spread the love of reading throughout Buckingham County Elementary School.

How can YOU get involved? Each book is around $1, so for only $9, you would provide one child one new book per month. You can mail a check for $9 made out to "Scholastic Book Club" to: Buckingham Co Elementary School, 40 Frank Harris Rd, Dillwyn Va 23936. Attention: Denise Gormus.

Note: I was so impressed with Denise's efforts that I am putting a check in the mail tomorrow - I also believe that a love of reading makes a big difference in this crazy world of ours. Thanks for your dedication, Denise!

Donating the 20th Gallon of Blood

At the March American Red Cross Blood Drive, David Patton reached the unbelievable benchmark of donating his 20th gallon of blood. Spencer Adams, coordinator for the drive, reported that officials with the American Red Cross stated that potentially three lives are saved for every pint of blood donated. Since 20 gallons is 160 pints, Patton has potentially saved 480 lives. Patton is a true hero who deserves the thanks of all his fellow citizens. Follow Patton's example and sign up to donate at the next local drive. Patton is shown with a Red Cross nurse. Submitted photo

Over 60 people gathered on Tuesday, August 20th at the Buckingham Arts Center for the monthly meeting of the Buckingham Chamber of Commerce. This was a special meeting not only with delicious pizza from Rt 60 Convenience (new Chamber member), but with the reveal of the winners of the Chamber Photography Contest. Chamber member, Faye Shumaker, is responsible for putting the contest together and does a great job. The photographs are judged by a qualified person outside of the county. It must have been a hard job with so many great pictures!

Best overall award went to Danny Taylor.

Nate, the son of Cassie Vaughn, has a rare gene deletion called STXBP1, causing him to use a wheelchair. He rides at Heartland Horse Heroes in both private lessons and Buckingham County School sessions. Nate's mother, employed by Norwex USA, applied for a grant for Heartland and was awarded $14,000 as part of their Brighter Future Foundation. The money will go directly to a machine that picks the rider up to mount the horse from a wheelchair, and a roof structure over the mounting ramp to house the electrical mounting device. Left to right are Lynn Owen, Donnie (the horse), LaRue Sprouse Dowd, Madeleine Caster, Cassie Vaughn, Nate Vaughn (in the helmet), Caleb Vaughn, Henry Vaughn, and Harrison Caster. Photo submitted.

LaRue Sprouse Dowd and Heartland Horse Heroes

By Sue A. Miles
Correspondent

Most newborn babies get blankets and rattles for gifts. LaRue Sprouse Dowd was given a pony. Yes, at birth. Turns out that her then ten-year-old sister wanted a horse and thus handed over her pony to her new baby sister. That seemed to set the stage for LaRue to become the horse woman she is today. It may have taken her a few years to be old enough to ride, but once she did, she has never stopped.

"My Dad (E. B. Sprouse) was the reason I rode," said LaRue. "He would ride with me and take me to horse shows every weekend from the time I was ten until I went to college." That gift pony, named Sugar and Spice, provided LaRue many splendid hours of riding time as she grew up in the Andersonville area. "I'd ride to Kyanite Mining every day," she said. "My mother (the late Velma Sprouse) would say 'be home by dark' and off I'd go." By the time LaRue was 15 she had ten horses in the family barn and was also training horses for other people. "A lot of times I was training horses for performance. Some were green enough that they hadn't been ridden before. Others just needed polishing."

That love of horses drew LaRue to attend Kentucky's Morehead State University, which is known nationally for its riding program. After completing the school's B.S. program as a vet technician, LaRue then earned an Equine Physical Therapy degree from Midway College, also in Kentucky.

After college, LaRue spent a number of years working as a veterinarian technician for a large equine hospital in Lexington, KY. She then traveled with race horses providing equine physical therapy. "I got tired of being a nomad and wanted to come home," she said. That return home, in 2006, included establishing Sprouse's Corner Ranch LLC in 2008, which has become a well-established horse farm in the area.

On any given day, and especially on weekends, the Ranch is a beehive of activity. Having the capacity of board up to 33 horses, the Ranch's rental agreement provides

LaRue Sprouse Dowd has owned and run Sprouse's Corner Ranch, LLC, since 2008. Riding ever since she can remember, LaRue boards horses as well as trains in jump, obstacle, western pleasure and hunter pleasure. LaRue is shown with Baby Doll, a 29 years old pony and five-year-old Bennett Feyerherd, who is taking lessons. All photos by Sue A. Miles feed, fly masks, blankets, and daily health checks. "Horse owners are at liberty to come and ride as they wish," said LaRue. "We will also ride for them and medicate for additional charges." LeRue teaches horses to jump, trail ride, western pleasure, and hunter pleasure (the English version). "Right now I'm focusing on riders," she says. "I take students from three years old to adults. Their focus is anything from show to trail riding to riding for pleasure."

The Ranch also has horse shows, numerous weeklong summer camps, and coordinates with local 4-H Clubs for qualifying events for state competition. They also facilitate the monthly Pegasus 4-H Horse and Pony Club meetings. Show team riders also use the Ranch's facilities to practice for weekend horse shows. Over a year's time literally hundreds of people use the Ranch's facility, many coming from in and out of state, thus, also doing much economic good for the county.

But, perhaps the real good is LaRue's involvement with Heartland Horse Heroes, a riding program designed for special needs and/or disabled children and adults. "Amy Aliston started the program in 1991," said LaRue. "I came on board as a volunteer at her facility in Rice in 2008. She recruited me as a board member and trained me to be PATH (Professional Association of Therapeutic Horsemanship International) certified."

The Heartland program began providing services to Buckingham in 2010 and since that time the center has moved to our facility," said LaRue. "At this point we are working with Buckingham and Cumberland Public Schools to offer therapy services to children in primary and elementary school."

The schools select the special needs students who will benefit the most, often choosing those with the greatest physical, social, mental, and behavioral needs. Those children with disabilities such as ADHD, ADD, Down's Syndrome, cerebral palsy, and others with combined disorders, are brought to the ranch by a school bus once a week for ten weeks for one- and one-half hours of classroom and arena sessions. Many children have an aide with them and all are monitored by trained volunteers. "We review their IEPs (Individual Educational Plans), provided by the schools so that we can assist them in achieving their educational goals. We also use the classroom to teach the care of horses, parts of the horse, colors, and balance. We make sure that on the first day they mount and ride a horse."

The program, which is registered as a 501c3 non-profit, has a yearly budget of $36,000. "The majority of our funding is grant driven through programs like the Charlottesville Area Community Foundation, LEAPS Foundation, Hampden-Sydney, and private donations," said LaRue. "We're happy to report that we've recently received a $14,000 grant from a company called Norwex which will allow us to purchase a mechanical lift for mounting wheelchair bound riders. Cassie Vaughan, a parent of one of our students and who works for the company, applied for the grant." The mechanical lift will be especially helpful as there are a number of disabled adults who also use our ranch for therapy."

LaRue sees the Heartland program as a benefit for everyone involved. "It's very rewarding. We enjoy seeing how the children progress. Traditional therapies don't always provide what a horse gives."

The selection of the right horse for the program is vital. "It can be difficult to find the right horse," said LaRue. "Of ten good 'lesson' horses, I may only have five who would work with this program. There may be a seizure, a child may kick and scream, all the while with five adults around him. The good horses will even slow down if they sense a child is having a seizure. Donnie is our best horse."

Success stories include children who don't speak in school starting to talk to the horse or about the horse. The rider also benefits greatly from developing better balance and core strength. "They become more social," said LaRue. "An ADHD student learns to focus more. Teachers have seen benefit in handwriting. The core development causes them to sit at their desk better. Children also learn empathy and compassion as they hug and touch a horse. They get instant feedback from the horse."

This type of intensive therapy requires a large number of staff and volunteers for both of the school programs. "We need leaders, side walkers, and classroom volunteers for the program," said LaRue. "No experience is necessary and we will provide training." Training sessions will be available September through November, 12-3 p.m.

The next step for the Heartland program is to put a roof on the arena so weather does not prevent the children from riding. "We have hosting a "Raise the Roof" Festival and Open House on September 28 from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m.," said LaRue. "There will be a Brunswick stew, open house, silent auction, pony rides, corn hole tournament, face painting, photo booth, a meet and greet of the horses, and demonstrations of therapeutic riding." Admission is $10.00 for adults, $6.00 for children with a rain date of September 29. With so many activities and offerings it sounds like a great Fall family outing.

So mark your calendar for the Raise the Roof Festival and consider either volunteering for the Heartland Horse Heroes Program or encouraging a friend or family member to volunteer. Not only will you get to explore the Sprouse's Corner Ranch facilities but by attending you, and perhaps your family, will have a better understanding of the good works of the Ranch.

And, when you're there, make sure you ask to meet Donnie. Better known as the best horse on the Ranch for the Heartland Horse Heroes program.

Pray For Me While I Fight For You

By James O. Haskins, Jr.

James O. Haskins, Jr.

All of our lives we have been raised to do and be the best that we can!
To be true and honest as a good man!
To be fair and just in all of the decisions that we make!
To serve God and country for our soul to take!
As a soldier we do it all for the great American Red, White and Blue!
SO, PRAY FOR ME WHILE I FIGHT FOR YOU!
As we travel from sea to shining sea!
We stand tall as an American soldier trying to be the best that we can possibly be!
We go from the front lines of war to the world's greatest natural disasters!
And even now it seems like life is moving that much faster!
We ask ourselves how much pain can the world make!
How much pain can our hearts take!
Just how strong do we have to be!
How much destruction do we have to see!
But as a soldier we have to endure and encounter it all!
We fight thru out all of the seasons – winter, summer, spring and fall!
And we do it all for the Red, White and Blue!
SO, PRAY FOR ME WHILE I FIGHT FOR YOU!

Pray for life and humanity!
Pray for this world and its wars that are filled with cruel insanity!
And as a soldier we have to stop and ask ourselves, are we at the end of our road!
Because God knows the world has definitely given us its load!
We go away and fight with our lives only to return home and See that things are not like they used to be!
And everything within your life has changed or gone away and all you can say is why, why did this have to happen to me!
But these are the trials and struggles that we go thru in life as we ask ourselves, who am I!
I am an American soldier, a defender of Freedom, a warrior for all humanity and we do it
For the great American Red, White and Blue!
SO, PRAY FOR ME WHILE I FIGHT FOR YOU!!

(James O. Haskins, Jr. lives in Buckingham and is a retired U.S. Army Staff Sergeant. He wrote Pray for Me While I Fight for You when he was in route to Iraq. )

African American Education Research Forever Rolls Through Buckingham County

Contributed by Mu Octavis Taalib
All photos taken by Mu Octavis Taalib

About 144 years ago, Buckingham County's native son, Carter G. Woodson, was born and raised in the area. His famous career changed the way the world thinks of African American history and has forever enshrined his name among the great contributors to humanity. Back in June 2019 on a research tour, my fellow researcher and I followed U.S. Route 15 into New Canton to take a look at his hometown. We wanted to get a sense of where Dr. Woodson first got inspiration to seek out a quality education for himself. We would then relay this bit of insight in our new book titled: Education Enigma: What American Historical Sites Teach Us about the Education of Ex-Enslaved Africans (Kindle Edition, 2019).

Our travels took us from Maryland across Virginia, Kentucky, and beyond to Oklahoma. We made two other stops to honor Dr. Woodson in Huntington, West

Slate River Ramblings

Joanne Yeck has been fascinated with Buckingham County for over twenty years and shares her collection of Buckingham facts and photos on her blog, "Slate River Ramblings" (slateriverramblings.com).

"Last Crossing of the Scottsville Ferry," 1907.

Samuel R. Gault stands in the lower right corner of the Scottsville Ferry on its last crossing of the James River in 1907. The new bridge, which made the ferry obsolete, is shown behind this group of young men and women as they enjoy their last ride on this historic ferry. This ferry had been in operation since 1745 when Daniel Scott, son of Edward Scott, was commissioned to build it here on the James River at a place known as Scott's Landing. ## Peter Valentine Foland: Great-grandson of Randolph Jefferson Occasionally, my ramblings take me outside the boundaries of Buckingham County following a Buckingham connection. Such was the case with Peter Valentine Foland, great-grandson of Randolph Jefferson, who spent his life living at Snowden on the James River at the Horseshoe Bend. His son, Peter Field Jefferson, was born at Snowden but spent his adult years living at Scottsville, owning various businesses, including the ferry which ran from Scottsville to Snowden on the southside of the James.

Peter Valentine Foland was the son of Peter Field Jefferson's only daughter, Frances Ann Jefferson, who married Valentine Foland, a Virginia-born cabinetmaker. Young Peter's parents left Scottsville before his birth in 1845 and he grew to manhood in Jefferson County, Tennessee.

It is likely that Peter Field Jefferson never saw his grandson, though he generously provided for his daughter's only child in his 1854 will. At twenty-one, Peter Foland would receive a handsome inheritance. In the near term, he had a war to fight. By 1866, Foland had claimed his inheritance (which included Mount Walla, the family home at Scottsville), and had married a local girl, Elizabeth "Bettie" Clarke Straton. Foland would spend the rest of his life in Scottsville, living amongst his Jefferson cousins who were scattered across Buckingham and Albemarle counties. An upright Virginia citizen, he operated his grandfather's ferry from Scottsville to the landing at Snowden in Buckingham County, the home of his great-grandfather, Randolph Jefferson.

Mount Walla c. 2000. Home of Peter V. Foland and family. Courtesy Virginia Department Historic Resources.

Thanks to Civil War records maintained by the National Archives, we have a glimpse into Peter Foland's war experience. On October 19, 1861, he enlisted for twelve months of service in Company G of the 43rd Tennessee Volunteers. In January of 1862, he was appointed fifer for the company. Described as having gray eyes and light hair, with a fair complexion, at 5'3" he later will be contradicted. Having served his full year and owing no funds to the Confederate States, in November of 1862, Foland headed home with $6.80 in back pay.

From the fall of 1862 until the fall of 1863, Foland apparently took a break from defending the Confederacy. Then, on September 15, 1863, at a place called Panther Springs, Tennessee, he reenlisted for a term of three years. He now was described as 5'6", indicating that his long-awaited growth spurt was behind him. This time his eyes were described as blue. Contrary to his previous discharge papers, this enlistment record states that he was born in Scott County, Virginia.

Foland joined Company F of the 9th Regiment of the Tennessee Cavalry and, a month later, appeared on the October 15, 1863 muster at Knoxville. Within a month, something was amiss. On November 15, the record shows that he had deserted his company, which remained in Knoxville. No other details were given. Over twenty years later, on July 8, 1885, this charge was removed from his war record, documented in a notation from the War Department: "The charge of desertion of November 5 (or 15) 1863 against this man is removed."

On February 5, 1864, Foland was captured by the Union Army, released the same day, and returned to his company. On November 14, 1864, he was captured again near Morristown, Tennessee. This time he was taken to Camp Chase in Columbus, Ohio. He may have been transferred to Danville, Virginia and then to Camp Parole, Maryland.

Peter Foland's final release from duty came on May 18, 1865. He was promoted to Corporal and given two months' pay in US currency. For many Confederate veterans, physical, psychological, and emotional wounds persisted long beyond the war. Peter Foland was no exception. On March 19, 1883, he applied for a pension as an invalid.

Despite any suffering from long-term wounds, Foland led a long and productive life, enjoyed a pleasant home in Scottsville at Mount Walla, served the community as postmaster, as a member of the City Council, and, eventually, as mayor. In 1907, he still operated the ferry between Scottsville and Snowden when it made its last run. A new steel-girder bridge, with its noisy plank road, had made it obsolete.

Peter Foland died on July 27, 1915 of uremic poisoning, a complication of chronic nephritis. On August 12, 1915, his wife, Bettie, applied for a war widow's pension. She lived at Mount Walla until her death in 1921.

Elaine Hess Baxter is 102!

The Beacon may be a bit late in wishing Elaine Hess Baxter a happy birthday (her birthday was June 25th) but when you're 102 years old, you have likely learned to accept people's faults and simply go along with the program. Baxter, who lives in Whorley Town, with her daughter, Lynn Henshaw, was born in North Powder, Oregon in 1917. Eventually she arrived in Buckingham County where she enjoys spending time with her daughter, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. Yes it's a bit belated, but happy 102nd birthday to Elaine Baxter. Photo by Sue A. Miles

Virginia, and Berea, Kentucky, where memorials have been erected in his honor. It was fitting, we thought, to honor the man whose works enabled us and millions more to come to grips with who we are as a people and how we are to see ourselves in American life. Our visit coincided with a stop at Third Liberty Baptist Church on a damp Sunday morning.

We stopped a young gentleman named Robert Jones and asked him about the community. He informed us that most, if not all, of the community there was related to Dr. Woodson in some way. A well-dressed young woman passed by as he was speaking. He beckoned her over and she introduced herself as Latoya. They invited us inside for worship service but we had to decline since it was going to be a long drive to Roanoke that day. Our new friends pointed to a monument next to the church grounds. There an impressive memorial of Dr. Woodson stood that had been erected by one of his organizations. We found that Dr. Woodson has numerous memorials to his credit all over the U.S. However, this one captures the historic significance by being virtually on or very near the actual home in which he might have lived. It was an awesome feeling being there.

The subject matter may be all too familiar, but just a few words here to acknowledge the combined effect that location, environment, and upbringing can have on a young person's life. Limitations aside, we find in persons like Dr. Woodson an unusual motivation and personal willingness to endure. The combination can make a difference between having a productive and happy life or living an unfulfilled one. The same could be said, of course, about fellow Virginian and educator, Booker T. Washington, whose boyhood home sits about 100 miles away in Hardy. Our research tour was just one of many that has come and gone and many more that will surely roll through Buckingham County in the years to come. We appreciate the honor.

September Community Pride Award

The Buckingham Chamber of Commerce presented its September Community Pride Award to Route 60 Convenience recently.

The store, which has undergone many recent improvements, is located on Route 60 just east of the courthouse village, and offers fuel, along with hot food and groceries.

"The Chamber is proud to recognize and promote small businesses in our community," said Community Pride Award Co-Chairman Thomas Jordan Miles III. "Ajay and Nikhil Patel have worked hard to improve the exterior and interior of their store, and the public, their customers, and the chamber have all noticed these positive measures."
