FSPCA to kick off annual fundraiser

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

In this season of charitable giving, let's not forget our furry friends.

The Fluvanna SPCA (FSCPA) will kick off its annual 12 Strays of Christmas fundraiser with the "12 Strays Soiree" at Cunningham Creek Winery on Ruritan Lake Road in Palmyra on Saturday, Dec. 14 from 6:30 to 9 pm.

Tickets for the event are $25 and can be purchased online or at the Happy Tails Pet Food & Accessories at Turkeysag. A limited number of tickets will also be available at the door on the night of the event.

Attendees can enjoy a complimentary glass of Cunningham Creek wine and hors-d'oeuvres courtesy of Troy Market, along with opportunities to win door prizes and participate in a 50/50 raffle. All proceeds will go to FSPCA.

FSPCA will also be participating in the First Annual Festival of Trees at Lake Monticello's Ashlawn Clubhouse on Dec. 6 from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. on and Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Its tree will be decorated with photos of some of their current residents.

The event will include entertainment, activities for the kids, story readings, and a chance for photos with Santa. Attendees are asked to donate either a toy, non-perishable food, or cash. Proceeds from the festival will go to FSPCA, Caring for Creatures, Peaceful Passings, and the MACAA Food Bank.

FSPCA has an aggressive goal of raising $30,000 between now and the end of 2020 as part of their "Raise the Roof" Capital Campaign. Its building on Union Mills Road is now 30 years old and needs a major overhaul, including roof repairs and interior improvements.

If you cannot attend an event but would still like to donate, you can do so at <https://www.gofundme.com/f/fspca>

Individuals or businesses interested in setting up matching gifts can contact events@fspca.org.

How do we Promote Residentism in Fluvanna County?

Bryan Rothamel

Fluvanna County Economic Development Coordinator

Residentism [rez-i-duh nt-iz-uh m]. It is possible, even likely you have not heard of this word ever before in your life. I'll save you the search. It is not in Webster's dictionary or any other notable dictionary. It is however printed, with a pronunciation guide and definition, on my office door.

Residentism is a word I created. We have a noun describing what happens when someone from out of the area visits and spends money in our county. That word is tourism. The tourism industry is rather large and Virginia has seen an uptick in recent years. This year is the 50th year of the greatest tourism campaign in the history of America: Virginia is for Lovers.

But what about when residents make a purposeful decision to stay in the community and doing so creates joy or happiness? Why is there no word for that? I asked my friends in the industry and they all had a phrase for it but no word. Often we call it "shop local" or "travel where you live." Residentism begins today with a simple choice of shopping local but continues long-term as a point of pride of our community.

EDTAC is growing the opportunity to practice residentism through various activities. The first is a list of 100 plus things to do in Fluvanna. It is wrapping up and we will begin publishing the list in 2020. This list includes simple park items such as hiking Sandy Beach Trail to commercial activities such as visiting Cunningham Creek Winery for live music to yearly events like the Fluvanna County Fair. If you are a business wanting to be included, please email me to get your item on the list.

EDTAC is also working on a LOVE sign at Pleasant Grove. This will be a focal point to the Pleasant Grove Park entrance and the perfect picture opportunity. Speaking of pictures, make sure to follow us on Instagram (@visitfluvanna) to keep up with the sights of the county.

I would love to hear how you do residentism or how we can encourage residentism. Who knows, maybe we can get it in Webster soon enough!

Fluvanna residents top most Virginians in net worth

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

Fluvanna County residents have among the highest per capita net worth in Virginia for a second year running, according to the financial services company, SmartAsset.com.

"The study measured net worth, income and debt across counties in the U.S. to see where people have the highest per capita net worth," said Scott Sabato of Smart Asset. "Fluvanna County ranked among the top places in Virginia."

Their analysis found Fluvanna residents have a per capita net worth of $60,038. That's a drop of $237 from last year's study.

Per capita income is up slightly at $31,952, compared to $30,220 last year. Per capita debt rose $320, now standing at $52,12 per person.

Net worth is defined as the value of things you own (assets) minus what you own in debts (liabilities). Looking at the percentages of net worth to income and net worth to debt, SmartAsset created an index of Virginia's highest net worth counties.

In 2018, Fluvanna ranked ninth out of the top 10 counties. This year, it has fallen to tenth place.

Posequon, near Hampton Roads, and Fairfax, in Northern Virginia, maintained the top two spots on the index.

Minnie Lee McGehee – Fluvanna’s memory

CONTRIBUTED BY MARVIN MOSS

With the death last week of 95-year-old Minnie Lee McGehee, Fluvanna County has lost one of its most cherished and memorable citizens – one whose legacy in our community will be on-going for generations. She was an historian of incredible ability, a researcher, a superb writer and mentor to the next generation of custodians of Fluvanna’s rich and varied past. She was an irrepressible force – a self-taught student and expert on everything about our county. Once you met her, you could never forget the experience.

I recall vividly the first time I met her. After I bought my historic home, Glen Burnie, in 1991, I would come from Washington, DC on weekends to clear the grounds which had been untended for many years. I slept on a futon on the floor of the unrestored 1829 house. One Saturday afternoon a car drove in and parked under the ancient white oak in the middle of the meadow. Exiting the car was almost the entire McGehee family headed up by Minnie Lee. After introductions she launched into a recitation of the entire history of Glen Burnie and its frequently colorful owners including dates and stories which only she knew. I felt that I had been visited by a whirlwind of knowledge and energy and went to bed that evening utterly exhausted. I only found out later after I became involved with the Fluvanna Historical Society that I had been the beneficiary of Minnie Lee McGehee’s awesome knowledge.

She was one of the early founders of the Fluvanna Historical Society along with an imposing group of women schoolteachers who set out in 1964 to start an organization dedicated to preserving its history and to opening the county-owned Old Stone Jail, the county’s first museum. Upon her return to Fluvanna she married Henry McGehee, the county’s extension agent and a man familiar with the lore and history of many local families. She set out on an organized effort to learn more and to become the legendary repository of Fluvanna’s history. Over the years, she wrote dozens of the Society’s bulletins on subjects as varied as our grist mills and the checkered history of our early county seat at Napier’s Ford. Her research included original sources and was meticulous.

Minnie Lee was a natural at writing although her style was more 19th century than contemporary, which lent itself to not only vivid descriptions of people and places but also to ensuring that her histories included a strong understanding of the roles played by individual citizens and institutions. Here is an example from her bulletin on Fluvanna’s grist mills: “The mills played an important part in the social, economic and political life of the community. ...The mill was the club, the favorite place for sharing news and debating the issues of the day.” She also played a key role in editing bulletins written by other authors and ensuring that they were historically accurate.

Perhaps one of her most important contributions to all of us was her efforts over the years to mentor the next generation of historians. Included in this were Deborah Murdock, Ellen Miyagawa, David Berr and Judy Mickelson. Deborah had been hired by the Virginia Department of Historic Resources to survey and describe historic places and structures in Fluvanna and surrounding counties. She, of course, enlisted the assistance of Minnie Lee, who would lead Deborah across streams, through woods and fields to a cemetery or a building that only Minnie Lee knew existed. It was an unforgettable experience. Ellen Miyagawa, who with her husband, Bob, had restored Melrose, one of our most historic plantation homes, later became president of the Historical Society and one of its most prolific and talented researchers and authors. She had been trained and inspired by Minnie Lee. David Berr, a descendent of the Shepherd family of Mountain View and Glen Burnie, became chair of the Society’s publications committee and worked closely with Minnie Lee on many projects. Both were very strong, voluble and imposing personalities so their meetings were sometimes almost as dramatic as some of subjects of their publications. Judy Mickelson became in 2005 the first full time executive director of the Society and soon was an adept student learning from Minnie Lee.

The life of Minnie Lee May McGehee and her innumerable contributions to documenting our county and its history exemplify the finest attributes of many of the people she had come to admire through her studies and writings. Her legacy includes her family, itself steeped in a deep understanding of our community and its people, and a treasure trove of bulletins and documents written in her beautiful English. Minnie Lee was an historian who brought history to life for all of us. We will greatly miss her and her indispensable leadership and work.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks to Page Gifford

I want to take an opportunity to send along a commendation for Page Gifford regarding a couple of columns that she has written in this past month. We have recently lost two wonderful people during that time, and Page has given us a great description of these people. Troy Widenhiemer had passed away after a struggle with cancer. Page knew Troy in a relationship that they both had here in Fluvanna with the organization for the arts. She presented us with a wonderful description of his very diverse interests beyond art in music and other areas. And then more recently our dear Thelma Stowell has left us. She was a vitally active individual in this community as a golfer an actress for PTP and a dancer. I sure wish that I could have enjoyed one of those lemon squares, a favorite. Regarding both of these individuals Page brought us to a place to feel a very personal acquaintance with both of them, in also giving us information that many of us may have known nothing about. And so, thank you Page Gifford for the gift of your words.

-Peace, Joe Shaver, Lake Monticello

Letters to the Editor

On global warming

An annual assessment on global warming by the United Nation’s Emissions Gap Report states that global greenhouse gas emissions have grown by 1.5 percent every year over the last decade and if the world is to avoid the worst effects of climate catastrophe including droughts, stronger storms and widespread hunger, action must be taken now. Emissions from the burning of fossil fuels must decline sharply, by 7.6 percent every year, for the next decade the report warned.

But world leaders gathering in Madrid thisweek for their annual climate negotiations are not meeting to plan their countries’ future emissions cuts, they are still discussing the rules that would shape the 2015 Paris Climate Agreement which puts the world on track for a rise of 3.2 degrees Celsius with Brazil, Australia and one of the top polluters, the United States, not in compliance. Another analysis looked at how much coal, oil and natural gas the world’s nations have said they expect to extract and sell through 2030. If all those fossil fuels were burned, the report found, countries would collectively miss their goals and the global 2-degree Celsius Paris target by an even larger margin.

Is there a limit to the damage we can inflict on our home planet? Could we reach an irreversible tipping point? Here’s an example. Our killing of 60% of the Earth’s wildlife in just the past 45 years is driving a mass annihilation of our fellow earthlings. Between 1970 and 2014, Earth lost nearly 60% of its mammals, birds, fish, reptiles and amphibians, a rate which is comparable only to the mass extinctions of the past. It is projected that by 2050 there will be only 10% of land on Earth that is substantively free of the impacts of human activities.

Past, present and future. If we could understand the impact we have already inflicted on our biosphere and truly believe that we are obligated to consider the risks of unleashing an irreversible impact on our future, only then might we find the wisdom and courage to change our minds today.

Fluvanna Faces: Andrew Pullen

BY MADELINE OTTEN
CORRESPONDENT

Where do you live?

"We live on Plain Dealing Road in Kents Store."

How long have you lived in Fluvanna County? What brought you here?

"I have been in Fluvanna for most of my life. I grew up in Scottsville and moved to Kents Store, where my wife's family is from."

Tell us about your family –

"I have been married to my wife Sarah for 11 years and we have an 8-year-old daughter, Emmalyn. My daughter loves animals and we have a revolving door of chickens, turkeys, rabbits and whatever other animals she may want as she grows up, but she is not getting a horse. We have a 3-year-old boxer, Gus and several Llewelin Setters (bird dogs) for hunting."

What did you want to be when you were growing up?

"I have always wanted to be a fireman."

What was your very first job?

"My mother cleaned houses for a living and my dad was a carpenter. Growing up, they would take turns bringing me to work with them where I would work odd jobs to earn a little cash or permission to hunt. When I was old enough to obtain a worker's permit, my first real job was at the Turners Citgo/Western Auto in the town of Scottsville."

What do you do for a living?

"I am a lieutenant with Spotsylvania County Fire and Rescue where I've been for more than a decade. Prior to that, I served as fireman in another locality and have been a career fireman since shortly after graduating Fluvanna County High School in 2004. My schedule provides me the opportunity to work another job as a political consultant. I've worked for Dr. Ben Carson, Congressman (Tom) Garrett, Congressman (Denver) Rigglesman and Senator (Mark) Peake to name a few. I am also elected to the Fluvanna County School Board where I represent the Columbia District."

What is one of your pet peeves?

"Not taking pride in your work and failing to pay attention to detail."

What do you like to do in your spare time?

"I don't have much spare time, but when I do I am the volunteer fire chief in Kents Store, I enjoy working with my Llewelin Setters, collecting firearms, hunting, fishing, shooting and almost anything outdoors."

Books or movies?

"Books because reading is key to success. The most successful and wealthiest people in America all have one thing in common, reading and I almost always read for education, rarely for entertainment."

Favorite book/series? Favorite movie?

"She Said Yes" and "Liberty Defined" are two of my favorite books, but it's really hard to choose. My favorite movie would have to be "Forest Gump".

Who is your favorite sports team?

"I'm more of a NASCAR fan than anything and Clint Bowyer is my favorite driver."

What pivotal decision helped to shape your life?

"The decision to accept Jesus as my savior is the most important decision I'll ever make."

Tell us about a way you have changed over the years –

"When in a supervisory role, having complicated conversations, setting expectations and holding folks accountable can be incredibly challenging and I've learned to strive for respect rather than popularity."

What has surprised you about your life?

"That I've grown to be more and more introverted as I've gotten older."

What's one thing you hope to accomplish before you die? "I would love to travel more, specifically to Alaska."

Tell us about one of your regrets.

"Not spending more time with my grandmother who suddenly passed away this year."

Tell us about your proudest moment.

"I have had so many proud moments and accomplishments throughout my career, but the thing I am the proudest of is my daughter, Emmalyn. She suffered a dry drowning on Easter 2018 and I had to perform CPR on her in the back of my car while my wife drove us to the closest ambulance in Louisa. Thankfully, she is ok and suffered no long-term deficits, but it certainly puts everything in perspective. I would rather express my praise and unwavering support for every single one of her accomplishments than focus on my own."

Favorite spot in Fluvanna County?

"There is a location on Hells Bend Road, on an old farm that I hunt and it is probably my favorite place in Fluvanna. You can see for hundreds and hundreds of yards with views of the mountains in the distance and beautiful sunsets."

What quote or saying do you connect with most?

"I would rather be exposed to the inconveniences attending too much liberty than those attending too small a degree of it." Thomas Jefferson

I love this quote because it describes my own principles and values in one sentence. In my opinion, primarily because of a two party political system, politicians are elected by voters who by in large want their representatives to use the government to impose their own beliefs on others rather than simply working on their principle task...protecting your liberty and that of those you may not agree with.

CVEC linemen power Bolivian communities

PRESS RELEASE

Central Virginia Electric Cooperative has a strong track record of commitment to its community. Now, that community extends 4,000 miles to the south.

That's because three CVEC linemen were instrumental in bringing electricity for the first time to five tiny villages in Bolivia as part of an international electrification project.

Josh Golladay, Jason Purvis and Allan Thacker said the 17-day project, completed in mid-September, changed the lives of the Bolivians they met, and their lives, as well.

"They sent us to the most remote places you can ever imagine in your life. Magic starts to happen. We see these people; we learn from these people. We talk to these people. They become our friends, we become their friends. These people are changed forever out of the darkness into the light," Purvis said.

Gary Wood, president and CEO of CVEC, said the linemen's exploits in difficult and challenging circumstances serves as an example of the way co-ops build communities here and abroad.

"We were very fortunate to have great representatives of our co-op to go down to Bolivia. Josh and Allan and Jason did an outstanding job and service," he said.

The effort was called United We Light: Project Bolivia. It was sponsored by the Virginia, Maryland & Delaware Association of Electric Cooperatives with its member co-ops including CVEC. A division of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, NRECA International, which electrifies developing nations, helped put together the trip.

Golladay, Thacker and Purvis were among 15 seasoned linemen who worked climbing poles, pulling and stringing wire, building structures and hanging transformers without the aid of bucket trucks or high-tech tools. In fact, some of the locals helped pull wire from long spools.

In all, crews used about 13 miles of line to power more than three dozen dwellings in five communities consisting of tiny houses built of adobe, mud, clay and sand.

"A lot of the challenges were the terrain, the weather and not being able to get your hands on the material when you need it," Thacker said. "The work was basically the same, it's just you don't have any type of equipment to work with. That's what makes it a little harder."

To get to the worksites, the three linemen endured three plane rides and a bus trip that lasted more than six hours. They ate and slept in primitive conditions and endured temperature extremes as South America passes from winter into spring. "Sunshine in the morning, raining by the afternoon and then cold," Golladay said.

The project will have immediate payoffs for residents, who plan to use electricity to power a water pump, use lights to keep carnivorous nocturnal animals at bay, and employ heaters to help process their key crop of quinoa.

"It'll tug at your heartstrings to see people that have struggled for that long and to be so thankful for something even we as linemen take for granted every day — just flipping a switch and having the lights come on," Golladay said. "For us to be able to come in for two days to make that a reality for them, I don't know that you're going to find a more fulfilling feeling in the world."

After completing work in a village named Coniri, Purvis handed some Bolivian currency to mayor Lorenzo Arroyo. Arroyo picked the bigger lineman off the ground and started crying.

"Can you believe that?" Purvis recalls. "Oh, it was amazing. And then we turned the lights on and, all of a sudden, everybody was just running into the room looking at the light bulb and crying."

Wood said the lessons of Project Bolivia will serve as an inspiration to the CVEC family.

"I can't say enough about what it means to have those folks representing the entire co-op and the work they did personally," Wood said.

"We're very fortunate that the board of directors, the staff and all of our employees really believe that the cooperative spirit needs to extend beyond just the limits of our service territory."

Central Virginia Electric Cooperative is a member-owned, not-for-profit, electric utility serving almost 37,000 homes, farms and businesses in the rural portions of 14 Virginia counties, including Fluvanna County.

Virginia Christmas trees selling 'faster than we can grow them'

Virginia Christmas tree growers are preparing for a robust season, but some worry there may not be enough supply to meet the demand.

"We're selling trees faster than we can grow them," said John Carroll, vice president of the Virginia Christmas Tree Growers Association.

Carroll said the fact that Thanksgiving fell later in November this year is creating a short supply. He said most customers buy their trees over the Thanksgiving weekend or the week after, and that's when most choose-and-cut-growers open.

With fewer days to buy and a strong demand for fresh Christmas trees, Carroll anticipates growers coming up short. "Choose-and-cut farms may close early if their supplies run out," he noted.

David Hubbuch, who operates Blue Ridge Tree and Berry Farm in Shenandoah County, isn't concerned about his tree supply. He said the weather has been ideal for his choose-and-cut farm, and he expects to have enough trees for the season. "We actually have a good selection."

That's not always the case, because Northern Virginia tree farmers grow trees that are not native to the area. "Most of the Christmas trees, firs, spruces and pines are natural to mountainous areas, so it's always a challenge to find the right varieties that are going to adapt to this climate and this type of soil," Hubbuch said.

No matter where they're grown in the state, Carroll predicts strong Christmas tree sales this season.

"The wholesale market is good for the producers," Carroll maintained. "Supply is tight, the crop looks good, and the good cold weather came in time to provide the seal beneath the needles."

Virginia chestnut group rekindling holiday tradition

PRESS RELEASE FROM VIRGINIA FARM BUREAU

The American chestnut tree of the past is long gone, but thanks to a group of Virginia farmers, centuries-old chestnut traditions are being re-introduced.

Virginia Chestnuts LLC, a group of chestnut growers offering "a taste of history," is comprised of five Nelson County farms—Braidablik Farm, Bryant Farm and Nursery, Helbert Orchard, Hopkins Orchard and Seamans' Orchard Inc.—and Jefferson Farm in Rockingham County.

Chestnuts owe a fair amount of their lore to the opening line of Nat King Cole classic The Christmas Song. However, when his timeless rendition was released in 1946, the American chestnut was already largely extinct. Now, if Americans have ever eaten chestnuts at all, they were likely imported.

Providing the public with fresh chestnuts has been Virginia Chestnuts' way of bringing a nearly forgotten legacy back into Virginia homes as well as those across the nation. The group shipped chestnuts to over 40 states in 2018. "Ninety percent of the chestnuts eaten in the United States are imported, and when they get to the grocery store, they're not refrigerated," said Kim Bryant of Bryant Farm and Nursery. "We keep our chestnuts refrigerated. We keep a good, fresh product, and when people get it they are just amazed with the quality of the flavor—they're nice and sweet like they should be."

In addition to the chestnut's natural sweetness, the nut has become a mainstay holiday food due to its health benefits. Chestnuts provide a low-calorie, lowfat snack compared to other nuts, but also are high in fiber, complex carbohydrates and vitamin C.

In addition to boiling or roasting chestnuts, they also can be used in recipes for soup, pasta, bread and stuffing. A chestnut puree can be added to cakes or made into a frosting.

"People don't realize how versatile chestnuts are," Bryant said.

She said Virginia Chestnuts' harvest this fall was its best yet, totaling 11,000 pounds. Demand also has been high, with two-thirds of the harvest already sold.

Local business owner steps up to counter vandalism spree

BY HEATHER MICHON
CORRESPONDENT

Vandals struck six different vehicles in an early-morning crime spree at Lake Monticello the weekend before Thanksgiving.

The unidentified suspects spray-painted obscene and offensive words and images on cars and RVs in the Riverside and Cherokee sections, causing hundreds of dollars worth of damage.

Now, a local business here in Fluvanna is offering to undo that damage—for free.

Jose Hernandez of DetailMeNow at Crofton Plaza on Lake Monticello Road made the offer.

"I'm here to help my community," he recently told NBC29, "and that's what I figure if someone's been targeted by such a malicious crime like that the only right thing to do is to offer something for free."

DetailMeNow opened at Crofton Plaza in the summer of 2018 and has garnered great reviews for the service he provides.

The business was profiled in the Fluvanna Review in August 2018. Hernandez told correspondent Madeline Otten at the time: "My favorite part would have to be the end result. I enjoy looking forward to what I can achieve and it's sometimes a challenge, which is what I like."

The damage sustained in the spree presents a challenge he's more than happy to tackle.

In a text to the Fluvanna Review, Hernandez said the offer stands for those who need it.

Anyone interested in DetailMeNow's services can call 434-808-9247, or stop by 106 Crofton Plaza. You can also visit them online at www.facebook.com/DetailMeNowVA/

Although the crime was caught by at least one victim's video doorbell, no arrests have been announced and the Fluvanna County Sheriff's Office continues to investigate. Anyone with information is encouraged to call them at 434-589-8211 or leave a tip at CrimeStoppers at 434-977-4000.

Art members visit Crossroads Gallery

BY PAGE H. GIFFORD

Several members of the Fluvanna Art Association visited Crossroads Gallery in Richmond on November 16 for their yearly field trip. In years past, trips included highlighted exhibits at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and various workshops. They had visited the Nichols Gallery and learned about printmaking and Fred Nichol's work as well as a variety of galleries on the downtown mall and the McGuffey Art Center. But Crossroads offered a wide range of art, from paintings to three dimensional work, and photography.

Visiting museums gave members a historical perspective of the masters and different art movements around the world influencing art in culture. Hands-on workshops in glass and printmaking introduced them to new mediums they might not have experienced. Galleries feature the current trends, styles, and reflections on the current culture.

The gallery boasts 225 artists and three buildings devoted to displaying, shows, and classes and 25,000 square feet of exhibition space. This is the place where private collectors, art and corporate consultants, architects, and interior designers go to find art that gives their clients self-expression.

Many mediums and styles were represented. Among the painters, it was less about societal messages and more about personal views and experiences. Travel and nature were popular themes with many artists. One artist created striking paintings in colored pencil. It has been said that Gloria Callahan's work resembles acrylic painting. She is also unusual, not only for her choice of medium but completing a Plein air piece in detail outside with colored pencils. She also uses water soluble oils but prefers colored pencils. It is a medium that requires tedious detail.

Many artists featured bright bold colors. Beginning artists are often afraid of color and how to manipulate it for the best results. Seasoned pros know how to control the bright chroma so it does not overwhelm the onlooker. Explosive color was evident in many abstracts, featuring blending and softened edges. Very few abstracts had hard lines which seemed to be a trend. Also, many were using the new medium of alcohol ink in their abstracts, giving them rich vibrant colors.

Members Bev Bowman and Brenda Cohen stood in awe of one artist's

Feeding people in need in central Virginia

BY EMMA GAUTHIER
CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

Every Thursday at 10:30 a.m., John White packs the trunk of his black Mercedes-Benz with meals that he distributes to people in need in Central Virginia.

For two years, White has been a volunteer with Feed More, a local organization involved with Meals on Wheels and Feeding America that serves Central Virginia through its 10 nutrition-assistance programs.

"It's been an education for me," White said. "There's quite a bit of poverty out there and it's so good to see the outreach that we have with Meals on Wheels."

This Thursday, Kroger is funding over 800 Thanksgiving dinners with a donation of $7,500. This marks the fifth consecutive year that Kroger has donated to Feed More for the holidays.

"We're immensely grateful to Kroger for their continued dedication to giving back to the community and their enthusiasm and passion for fighting hunger in Richmond," Feed More CEO Doug Pick said in a news release.

The partnership makes it possible for families in need to spend their Thanksgiving enjoying turkey, stuffing, cranberry sauce and more.

At least 11% of U.S. households lived in a state of food insecurity at some point in 2018, according to the USDA.

Food insecurity is classified as households that are either uncertain of having, or unable to acquire enough food to meet the needs of their family.

Feed More has existed in Virginia for more than five decades, beginning with the formation of its Meals on Wheels program, which in 1967, served just eight clients.

Since then, the organization has grown to serve almost 200,000 people throughout 29 counties and five cities across Central Virginia.

"With the support of our community, we are able to provide our neighbors who face hunger with one of the most basic necessities: nourishment," said Audrey Gilani, marketing coordinator at Feed More.

More than 1,600 people volunteered with Feed More in 2018, donating a total of nearly 70,000 hours. About 460 groups also volunteered for almost 83,000 hours.

"I am so impressed with the organization, the efficiency and the good-will spirit of the volunteers at Feed More," White stated in a social media message.

Feed More received nearly $45 million worth of donated food in 2018, primarily from retailers, manufacturers and produce growers. Half of the donated food consisted of fresh produce and meat.

The organization receives millions of pounds of donated food each year. During 2018 the largest donor was Food Lion with more than 5 million pounds, followed by Walmart with about 4.5 million pounds.

Multiple Feed More programs are dedicated to children living in food insecurity. The Weekend Backpack program distributed over 55,000 meals to 54 schools for children to take home on weekends.

In Central Virginia, one in seven children do not know when their next meal will be, according to Feed More. Gilani says she is pleased with how programs such as Mobile Pantry, School Market and Weekend Backpacks reach vulnerable communities struggling with food access.

"Feed More is there for our neighbors when they need us most," Gilani said.

Collectively, Feed More has distributed nearly 21 million meals to those in need.

"If the rest of us will just provide them with the resources," volunteer Bill McCoy said, "the chances of anybody in the region having to go to bed hungry go way down."

work. Ocean waves rising in upheaval were classic modern realism and the light reflected in the waves were near perfection except for nature itself. The teal underside of the waves looked like glass. Not too many can capture such flawless detail.

Mixed media and collage were also making a comeback, using contemporary techniques to make pieces unique and beautiful. Collage takes just as much thought as a painting but has some interesting effects.

The painters were involved with experimentation in mediums, including cold wax with oils (aids in the drying), alcohol inks, mixing colored pencils with other paints, and not settling for the purist approach to art. In other words, artists today are breaking the rules and making pieces that reflect their views in a new way.

The member's show was eclectic and offbeat. The FAA members were uncertain of why some won in their category but only the judges would understand their reasoning as to why certain pieces won. Most of the winners were abstracts and this added to the confusion of FAA members. Everyone will view things differently is the only way to explain this phenomenon.

Anyone looking at the vast body of work can appreciate the time and skill that went into each piece. Wood sculptures were smooth, reaching upward in a twisting motion while the glass was delicate and iridescent. Pottery showed distinctive and clever ideas and each piece of jewelry was personal and exquisite. It is amazing to look at each artist's work and to be drawn into their creative minds.

For the FAA members, it was inspiring even though some believed they could never reach this level. But seeing the possibilities influenced a few to try and venture into new areas of artistic endeavor.

Top athletes return for Fluco indoor track and field season

BY DUNCAN NIXON
CORRESPONDENT

Coaches Steve Szarmach and Rose Brogan both have a good number of All-State and All-Region athletes returning for the 2019-20 winter indoor track and field season. Coach Szarmach's boys' squad finished second in the Region and ninth in the State meets last season. The girls' team under Coach Brogan was third at the Region meet and returns a host of top track and field athletes.

All-State returnees on the boy's team include seniors Eli Hartzog, Ledric Reed, Cameron Holland and Ethan Yancy. Hartzog was All-State in the shot put during the indoor season last year. He also throws discus in the spring season. Reed was All-State in the 55meter hurdles and was an important member of the 4X400 relay team. Holland, who was a wide receiver and defensive back on the Fluco football team, made All-State last year in the triple jump and was member of the All-State 4X200 relay team. Ethan Young was All-State last season in the pole vault. All of these athletes report that they hope to continue to compete in track and field at the college level. Holland was also All-Region in the long jump.

Sophomore Eric White was All-Region in the 500 meter run last season and competed in June at the outdoor National event in the 400 meter run. Joining the team this season will be freshman Jaden Ferguson who competed in June at the National outdoor meet and finished first in his division in the triple jump.

Coach Brogan said she has a number of returning athletes who were All Regional and/or All State last year in the indoor and/or outdoor season. Senior Amina Wilson was outstanding in the pole vault last year. Senior Kieri Hart excelled in the 500 meter run and was a member of the 4X800 relay team. Two juniors who were top distance runners last year are Emily Smeds and Emily Beckman. They both were top performers in the 1600 meter (metric mile) and the 3200 meter runs. Both of them were also members of the outstanding 4X800 meter relay team. Another junior who a top performer as a sophomore is Kaitlin Bower who competes in the 55 meter dash and the triple jump.

A sophomore returnee who excelled at the hurdles is Shea Hart. Brogan also returns Hattie Lintecum who was outstanding in the high jump and triple jump and who was also on the 4X800 relay team. Sylar Solga who was on two top relay teams also is back. Coach Brogan said that she is "looking for a solid season with the girls returning and the addition of some dedicated ninth graders."

The Fluco indoor track and field team does not have home meets, as the Fluvanna County High School does not have an indoor track facility. Very few public high schools in Virginia have indoor track and field facilities. Fortunately for the Fluco squad, there is an excellent indoor facility down the road a bit at the Fork Union Military Academy (FUMA). The Flucos first meet will be on Dec. 7 at Liberty University. Then on Dec. 11, Dec 18 and Jan. 22 they will compete in events at FUMA. On Jan. 25 the squad travel to St. Chris and on Jan. 30 to Woodberry Forest. The District, Region and State meets are scheduled for Feb. 5, Feb 19 and Feb. 28.
