Fluvanna Fire seeks to restore EMS authority after suspension

BY HEATHER MICHON
EDITOR

Fluvanna County Volunteer Fire Department’s authority to provide emergency medical care was suspended on Sept. 11 by Operational Medical Director Dr. Brendan Byrne after repeated warnings over problems at the Palmyra Fire Company.

County Administrator Eric Dahl said Byrne acted because he found that Palmyra had failed to maintain an adequate response rate to dispatched EMS calls, provide a consistent and reliable quality-assurance and quality-improvement process, or appoint an EMS officer.

In his written notice, Byrne said Palmyra had “consistently and persistently” failed to meet those requirements despite “multiple verbal and written warnings.”

The suspension, imposed for up to 45 days, affects volunteer personnel at Palmyra, Kents

Store, and Fork Union, as all three operate under Fluvanna County Volunteer Fire Department, Inc.

Lake Monticello Volunteer Fire & Rescue is a separate organization and is not included in the suspension.

The action does not revoke the department’s state agency license or suspend any individual EMT or paramedic certifications. It impacts only the department’s volunteer staff. Fluvanna provides ambulance service through paid county EMS personnel, and that service remains fully operational.

Byrne also said including Fork Union and Kents Store should not be construed as evidence of adverse performance, and both stations met their requirements.

Fire Chief Andrew Pullen said Byrne extended the suspension to the entire corporate department so the other two companies would help press for changes at Palmyra.

Pullen said he initially disagreed with including Fork Union and Kents Store but ultimately saw the department-wide action as necessary to overcome resistance and correct the problems at Palmyra.

“I understand his position, and he’s right,” Pullen said in an interview Thursday morning.

Pullen said department and county officials knew the suspension was possible and were not blindsided by the decision.

He described the suspension as part of a broader response to longstanding leadership, administrative, and cultural problems at Palmyra.

Shortly before the suspension, Pullen appointed Jamie Baughn as Palmyra’s new chief and named a new assistant chief to strengthen the company’s administration. Pullen said the leadership changes were needed to address the company’s operational and administrative problems.

Byrne’s notice allows him to restore authorization before the 45-day period expires, provided the department presents an acceptable corrective plan. Pullen said leaders from all three companies were working on that plan and hoped to have authorization restored within the next several days.

The notice was still in effect as of press time on Tuesday, Sept. 29.

The suspension has prevented volunteer personnel from providing EMS care through the department.

Pullen illustrated the practical effect by describing an incident at the Fork Union Day celebration on Sept. 12.

A person suffered a seizure while volunteer firefighters, including members wearing uniforms identifying them as EMTs, were present. Because the department’s authorization had been withdrawn, Pullen said, they could not provide EMS care.

Restoring authorization is a priority. At the same time, he believes the corrective process could help establish a stronger, more sustainable role for the department within the county’s emergency-response system.

Protect reproductive rights in Virginia

Proposed State Constitutional Amendments about Reproductive Rights:

FYI! This protects and maintains a Virginian's right to make their own decisions about pregnancy, birth control, abortion, and fertility care. It also protects the DOCTOR'S right to treat MISCARRIAGES the safe and sane way by scraping out the womb. None of us wants any women to be sent to bleed out in the parking lot because doctors are afraid of going to jail for performing a STANDARD PROCEDURE.

This horror is taking place all over the country due to the unforeseen consequences of unreasonably strict abortion bans. Keep in mind that, regardless of your moral convictions, this can happen to any woman. I know someone who had a tubal pregnancy and didn't know it. Thank God, she was in a state that permitted the doctors to treat it...otherwise, she'd be dead today.

Please keep in mind: This Amendment does NOT mean that Abortion is allowed at ANY time during the pregnancy. Limits on late-term pregnancy still apply. As ALWAYS.

Virginia bans abortion after 27 weeks and 6 days. After 27 weeks, an abortion is only allowed if three physicians certify that continuing the pregnancy threatens the life or health (including mental health) of the pregnant person or if the fetus cannot survive.

Nobody with any compassion would want a woman to suffer the agony of carrying and delivering a dead fetus. If you do not know that this is actually happening now, in our country, please double-check what your news source is telling you. It's very important that people stay informed and think for themselves because these days, lies and deceit are running amok.

-Beth Sherk, Fork Union

Three questions for voters in 2026

As we head into the 2026 elections, ask yourself three questions:

1. Am I safer because of my government?

Safety has been compromised. With climate change no longer being addressed, there will be more floods, wildfires and droughts. With FEMA staff cut in half, who will help in these disasters? Cuts to NOAA mean we can't predict the weather as well, giving us less warning in a disaster scenario. Regulation rollbacks will lead to more air and water pollution.

Vaccine misinformation equals more measles cases. With fewer inspectors, more contaminated meat and vegetables go unnoticed.

Trump's government cut back on cybersecurity. Iran can apparently hack our water systems if it wants to. AI is supposed to be able to kill us all by the end of the decade, and Trump is against regulating it! Nukes in the U.S. can be set off by one man who often has tantrums.

2. Do I feel financially secure?

Tariffs and Trump's war in Iran have pushed prices up on everything, especially fuel. Because the war is unlikely to end anytime soon, fuel prices could soar, affecting all other goods. The war was never approved by Congress. We need a Congress that can stand up to Trump.

3. Am I proud of America?

We all want to be. We love our country. But other countries can't trust us. People who helped us in wars are being denied asylum. World leaders are appalled by the U.S.'s rejection of real diplomacy. Trump will not cross Putin, even when Russia is helping Iran target and kill Americans.

How can we feel safe and proud and have hope? We can vote for Tom Perriello and Mark Warner to go to Washington to slow down the relentless destruction by Trump and his minions.

-Bonnie J. Redding, Palmyra

Caregiving family supports Perriello

My name is Dani Doughty, and I live in Fluvanna County. I am writing to share my support for Tom Perriello.

Our family has always had an affinity for the mountains, but we also knew we had to remain near a major hospital system. That requirement ruled out many rural areas across the state. In late summer 2019, we found our home in Fluvanna County. It felt like the best of both worlds, offering rural living nestled between two major health systems in Central Virginia.

For our family, the health-care debate is not an abstract political talking point; it is our daily reality. We rely heavily on accessible healthcare, Medicaid funding and resources that allow our medically complex children to receive care at home rather than in medical institutions. While private health insurance serves as our primary coverage, Medicaid provides what our private plan frequently denies, including necessities such as wheelchairs, feeding tube formula and other medical equipment.

Caring for children with complex medical needs is exhausting, but the administrative burden is often the most frustrating part. Countless hours are spent on the phone battling insurers, doctors, medical suppliers and pharmacies just to secure what our children need to live full lives at home in the least restrictive environment.

Tom Perriello understands that caregiving families need flexible, reliable support. He treats healthcare as a fundamental right rather than a privilege. Having a representative who genuinely listens to the real challenges his constituents face, rather than sending boilerplate responses, would be a meaningful change for our community. I encourage my neighbors across Fluvanna to make their voices heard.

Dani Doughty, Palmyra

Celebrating 100 years of E.W. Thomas

The Sept. 20 celebration of the 100th anniversary of our much-loved E.W. Thomas was a heartwarming and fitting tribute to more than a store. It honored the Thomas family, who have worked tirelessly over decades to make their business a social center as well as a thriving local business.

The hundreds of happy people who turned out were a testament to what E.W. Thomas has become in our community: a successful business with a heart. During the COVID pandemic, when local people needed help in different ways, Beth and the family stepped forward. They did so without fanfare or seeking public recognition, because it was the right thing to do.

The celebration and its enthusiastic participants showed the affection Fluvanna's people feel for the store, its founding family and its many employees.

They're coming! They're coming this month! The Orionids meteors will arrive later this month to thrill us with their spectacular flare and frequency. Not only will this happen in October, but we can also witness many of the exciting events with which we are well familiar, including planetary and lunar conjunctions (remote objects visually appear close to one another); the moon moving through its many phases; and the auspicious opportunity to see Mercury and Saturn when they are positioned opposite the Sun and are highly visible due to their positions. Hopefully some of these events capture your interest and motivate you to spend time observing the night and early morning dark sky this month.

Weeks 1-2 (October 1-10)

On October 3, the moon moves into its last quarter phase, when the left side of the moon will be illuminated. You can observe the moon in the constellation Cancer.

October 4 offers a rare opportunity to clearly view the planet Saturn, as it will be opposite the Sun and readily observable with the naked eye. Saturn can be found in the constellation Cetus on this evening

Also on this evening, the moon

The moon will be in conjunction with the planet Jupiter, in the constellation Leo, on October 6. This event will be visible with the naked eye.

On October 10, the moon will enter its new moon phase and will no longer be visible except as a ghostly sphere in the sky; this month, the new moon will be positioned in the constellation Virgo. This moon phase gives us a better view of the night sky since there will be no moonlight to obstruct views of stars and planets.

COACH'S CORNER

with Coach Mitchell Pace

A tough loss, a tremendous crowd

Fluco Football Fans, Last Friday night was both amazing and disappointing. Not pulling out the win against Louisa was a tough loss for us, but seeing the community turn out in record numbers to support our boys is something they'll never forget.

Great performances by offensive weapons like WR Brody Shields (3 Rec. TDs), QB Jack Pace (3 Passing TDs), and RB Garrett Jordan (2 Rushing TDs), behind a great effort by the offensive line, kept us in the game. Defensively, we improved as the night went on but struggled to stop our opponent's big runs.

This team, and all of the Fluco Football Brotherhood, will still do great things this season. Not even at the halfway point, I expect them to rebound this week, get back on track toward our larger goals, and host a playoff game in Fluvanna in November.

Thanks again for the outstanding crowd, and I hope to see you like every Friday night from here on out. It's simply the best place to be in Fluvanna County in the fall under the bright lights.

We would appreciate a large fan base following us to Western Albemarle this Friday night as we take on the Warriors in Crozet. A solid team, Western passes the ball considerably more than previous opponents and always plays well at home... we need you there to help us get another big win! 7:00 pm kickoff, and tickets are available on Go.Fan.co.

Thanks,
Coach Pace

Starting on October 21, the excitement of the Orionids meteor shower begins. This is a Major (Class I) meteor shower with the possibility of over 20 meteors appearing within an hour from October 2 through November 12, with the peak of the shower occurring between October 21 and 23. The meteors originate in the constellation Orion and radiate out in all directions. A good time to observe this shower is from midnight until dawn on October 21.

On October 25, the moon will move into its full moon phase. The moon will appear within the constellation Taurus. This full moon is commonly known as the Hunter Moon because game animals have gotten fatter for the winter and are easier to catch for human food when hunted at this time of year. This moon is also called the Drying Rice Moon (Dakota people), the Freezing Moon (Ojibwe people), the Ice Moon (Haida people), the Falling Leaves Moon (Anishinaabe people), and the Migrating Moon (Cree people).

Completing the month's events, the moon will be in conjunction with the Pleiades star cluster (aka the Seven Sisters and M45) within the constellation Taurus on October 27. The moon will again be in perigee on October 28. On October 31, the last quarter moon will be in conjunction with the stars Castor and Pollux within the constellation Gemini.

Flucos push Louisa to the wire in 42-35 thriller

Fluvanna rallies in the second half, but a late interception seals Louisa's win

BY DUNCAN NIXON
SPORTS CONTRIBUTOR

This is what high school football is all about: the Fluvanna County Flucos and neighboring Louisa County Lions, both 3-0 coming in, battling under the Friday night lights before a lively crowd of home and visiting fans. That the outcome was still in doubt with just two minutes on the clock made it even more special.

The Flucos took the opening kick-off and went three-and-out. After the Flucos punted, the Lions marched 78 yards for the first of many touchdowns in the game.

Fluvanna answered with a 69-yard drive. The big play was a 30-yard pass from senior quarterback Jack Pace to senior wide receiver Brody Shields to the 9-yard line. Pace then hit Shields in the back of the end zone on fourth down, and the PAT by Matteo Viscardi was good for a 7-7 score.

The Lions responded, scoring in three plays, and the first quarter ended with a 14-7 Lions lead.

The second quarter started with the Flucos on the march. The big play was a pass from Pace to junior "Crumbs" Loving. Senior running back Garrett Jordan punched it in for the tying touchdown with 10:11 left in the half.

Unfortunately for the Flucos, the Lions' offense was impressive; they scored a touchdown with 6:23 remaining in the half and scored again with six seconds left. Extra points were good after both TDs, and the Lions took a 28-14 lead into half-time.

The Flucos did not fold. They forced the Lions to punt on the second-half opener. On Fluvanna's third play from scrimmage, Jordan shook off a couple of attempted tackles and broke free for a 53-yard touchdown run.

Louisa answered on its first play from scrimmage. A sweep to the right went all the way for a touchdown, pushing the lead back to two touchdowns.

The Flucos came right back. With 4:53 left in the third quarter, Pace found Shields in the back of the end zone again. The extra-point attempt failed, leaving Fluvanna down 35-27 at the end of the quarter.

On the second play of the fourth quarter, Louisa caught a break. Two Fluco defenders contested a long pass to a Lions receiver, and an interception looked possible. Instead, the ball popped into the air and landed in the receiver's hands. Louisa had first-and-goal and scored to make it 42-27 with 9:18 left.

Fluvanna drove downfield once more. Under heavy pressure at the 9-yard line, Pace lofted a pass toward the front of the end zone, where Shields made a diving catch for the Flucos' fifth touchdown. A successful two-point conversion cut Louisa's lead to seven.

The Lions took the ensuing

kickoff and tried to run out the clock, but two holding penalties left them facing fourth-and-23. They punted, and a favorable bounce pinned the Flucos at their own 1-yard line with 2:27 remaining.

Jordan broke a run to the Fluvanna 48. A pass to Loving then moved the Flucos to the Louisa 46 with 36 seconds left, keeping a tying touchdown within reach.

But a pass over the middle slipped off the receiver's hand and was intercepted by Louisa, ending Fluvanna's comeback bid.

After the game, Coach Michell Pace said it was a tough loss. Nevertheless, a 3-1 start, including a road win over a once-defeated Buckingham County squad, is impressive.

The Flucos are now in the Jefferson District portion of their schedule. On Oct. 2, they travel to Western Albemarle. They then host Monticello High on Oct. 9, in their homecoming game.

After away games at Orange County and Charlottesville, they return home for their Senior night contest against Goochland County on Oct. 30. The final game of the regular season will be at Albemarle High.

Donations sought for annual Happy Face Party

CONTRIBUTED BY DEBORAH OWENS

The Fluvanna Christian Service Society's (FCSS) annual Happy Face Party will be held Saturday, Dec. 5, at Central Elementary School. FCSS partners with Social Services, Region Ten, the Health Department, and Child Health Services to help qualifying families in the county enjoy the Christmas season.

FCSS is collecting new toys, stuffed animals, and books for children from infancy through age 13. Books are especially needed for children ages 0 to 5. Toy suggestions include science kits, makeup kits, STEM toys, drones, LEGO sets, remote-controlled vehicles, digital watches, and toddler toys. Please do not donate toy guns or other toy weapons.

The group is also collecting new children's winter coats and pajamas in sizes from infant through 18. Collection boxes will be set up around the county by Oct. 16. In addition to many local churches, locations include the Fluvanna Public Library, Monticello Country Realtors, Ivy Physical Fitness, Cuppa Joe, the Lake Monticello Ashlawn clubhouse, and the MACAA food pantry and thrift shop. Monetary donations are also appreciated.

At the party, children will hear the story of Christ's birth and have an opportunity to be photographed with Santa Claus. Families will also receive a food voucher to help provide a Christmas meal.

To volunteer or ask questions, email Mary Kidd at marykidd01@gmail.com.

The fifth annual studio tour celebrates local artists

BY PAGE H. GIFFORD
ARTS & CULTURE CONTRIBUTOR

The fifth annual studio tour will showcase local fine art and craftsmanship Oct. 17 and 18, rain or shine, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Visitors can explore work ranging from woodworking and jewelry to photography, printmaking, mixed media and painting.

Returning artists include Wayne Cain, with his intricate stained glass; Eileen Butler, with mosaics and bold, colorful collages; Mary Jane Cathers, with one-of-a-kind woven designs; and Mary Beth Pfeiffer, with fiber art and beaded jewelry.

Painters include Lyndsay Nolting and Linda Staiger, who has added ceramics to her work. Susan Edginton draws in charcoal, colored pencil, pastel, and other media, often depicting dogs and other animals. Diane Wilkin and Alyce Walcavich will show their printmaking, Mike Harrison will showcase ceramics, and Duffy Dillinger will present her sculptures.

Woodworkers Chris Nothnagle, Jim Wilkin, and Dennis Meyer are also returning. Carol Sorber uses flameworking to create delicate, iridescent glass pieces, while Dale Sharon Nomura will show her jewelry designs.

James and Dianna Roberts return for their second tour with photographs of nature. Pictures from a recent trip to Watkins Glen State Park in New York's Finger Lakes region capture deep gorges and rushing waterfalls nestled in the woods.

New to the tour is Tania Saumell, whose work includes bright pop-art paintings and mixed media. Gillian Ruffa works with metal and fabric. Describing her jewelry on Facebook, Ruffa said she has explored texture as a surface decoration in sterling silver and copper, but has more recently focused on colorful patinas.

"I apply a variety of solutions and materials to the copper, which results in infinite possibilities. I love the thrill of unveiling the pieces to see the intricate patterns created," she wrote.

Kim Critzer, another newcomer, creates art through Red Dirt Farm and Studio. The self-taught artist works in acrylic, watercolor, soft pastels, and other media.

"I paint abstract, folk art, and naive styles. I also enjoy creating collage and assemblage art, incorporating vintage and found objects," she said. "My styles often incorporate bold colors and joyful themes centered around my love of nature."

Lisa Daniel is also joining the tour for the first time. Like Critzer, she is self-taught and drawn to whimsical subjects and bold colors. Critzer's work tends toward abstraction, while Daniel's is more grounded in realism.

"This is my first year doing the studio tour. I'm excited to get involved," Daniel said. She will show her work alongside Edginton at Cunningham Creek Winery, where she currently has an exhibition.

"I have gotten a lot of great feedback on my quirky style and have sold some pieces," Daniel said. The one drawback to participating, she added, is that she won't be able to take the tour herself. "There are so many talented people in the county."

For the tour, Daniel plans to show a wider range of her work, including commissioned portraits of people, pets and horses. She also participated in Linda Staiger's Looking Back, Seeing Now portrait project and is delighted to show some of those pieces.

As a first-time participant, Daniel said she has discovered how much work goes into the event, from the artists' preparations to the tour board's planning and communication. "We all hope you enjoy it."

Still time to weigh in on NextEra-Dominion merger

FLUVANNA REVIEW STAFF

Central Virginia residents still have time to weigh in on the proposed merger of Dominion Energy and Florida-based NextEra Energy—by phone, in writing, or with a road trip.

The State Corporation Commission (SCC) recently added two public hearings for the case, though neither is in this region. The new dates are Oct. 7 in Newport News, and Oct. 9 in Fairfax County.

Written comments in case PUR-2026-00112 are due by Nov. 9 and can be submitted through the SCC website. Telephone testimony is scheduled for Nov. 5, 9 and 10, with registration for speaking slots due Nov. 2.

Citizens can also testify in person at the SCC’s Richmond office on Nov. 5, from 2 to 5 p.m.

The roughly $67 billion merger would give NextEra control of Dominion Energy Virginia, which serves parts of Fluvanna County.

If approved, the combined companies would form the world’s largest regulated electric utility. Shareholders approved the merger on Sept. 3, but state and federal regulators still have to weigh in.

On Sept. 14, the two companies submitted an expanded benefits package to Virginia regulators. It would extend a proposed $10 monthly residential bill credit from two years to four, add $100 million to Dominion’s low-income assistance program through 2038, and maintain current Virginia employee headcount for five years. NextEra also proposes a new Richmond office tower and 600 additional jobs in Virginia.

NextEra CEO John Ketchum said in the filing that the new proposals were in response to public comments and are aimed at providing immediate benefits to consumers and to the state,

Clean Virginia and Virginia Attorney General Jay Jones have argued to the SCC that the substantial revisions strengthen its case for more review time. It has challenged whether the companies’ original application was complete enough to start the statutory 180-day clock.

Under the existing timeline, a decision would be due by January 11, 2027; the SCC has not announced a reset. The evidentiary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 17 in Richmond.

Vote NO

on Unlimited Abortion in Virginia’s Constitution

AMENDMENT 1 WILL

- Expose underage girls to abortion without parental knowledge or consent
- Eliminate protections for babies born alive in an attempted abortion
- Insert a right to “fertility care” in the Constitution, exposing minors to risky gender transition attempts
- Increase “abortion tourism” to Virginia, resulting in more abortions, even after viability, for sex selection, or when a baby has a treatable health condition
- Subject to criminal consequence anyone found to be “directly or indirectly infringing” on the “right” to an abortion
- Protect from legal consequence anyone persuading or helping a minor girl to have an abortion without parental knowledge

UNDER CURRENT VIRGINIA LAW

Nearly 40,000 abortions occur every year.

The state Constitution does not mention or refer to abortion.

Virginia law protects minor girls from being subjected to an abortion without parental or judicial consent.

Virginia law requires life-saving medical care when a baby is born alive in an attempted abortion.

Virginia law restricts abortion after 27 weeks.

Spanberger presses Congress for AI guardrails as states forge ahead

MARKUS SCHMIDT,
VIRGINIA MERCURY

Gov. Abigail Spanberger on Tuesday called on Congress to set national rules for artificial intelligence, warning that its rapid development could threaten jobs, privacy and public resources if oversight remains largely in the hands of the companies building it.

In a letter to congressional leaders, the Virginia Democrat urged federal action while pledging to pursue measures within the state’s authority. She sent the letter to House Speaker Mike Johnson, Senate Majority Leader John Thune, House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries and Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer.

“The potential impacts of AI are too great to leave the regulation of this technology solely in the hands of private entities, especially when the CEOs of those same companies are also sounding the alarm on the significant risks presented by uncoordinated regulation,” Spanberger wrote.

Her appeal comes as Washington remains divided over how aggressively the federal government should rein in the technology.

Johnson told NBC’s “Meet the Press” earlier this month that Congress should not rush to regulate AI, warning that poorly considered rules could put the United States at a competitive disadvantage against China. He said the issue called for guardrails but would not commit to bringing the House back before the Nov. 3 election to pass them.

Johnson’s remarks came amid calls to slow AI development, something Spanberger did not ask for in her letter. Instead, she argued that federal oversight and continued technological development need not come at the expense of one another.

“The notion that the United States must choose between AI safety and AI leadership is a false dichotomy,” she wrote. “America can do both, but we need federal-state collaboration to advance thoughtful AI regulations that safeguard the public while supporting technological progress.”

Spanberger, who served three terms in Congress before leaving to run for governor, also stopped short of proposing specific federal legislation. Instead, she called on lawmakers to consider AI’s effect on Americans’ safety, livelihoods and well-being and establish “guardrails that achieve meaningful AI accountability.”

Amid the concerns she identified were data privacy, the technology’s potential effects on workers and the resources consumed by the infrastructure required to run increasingly powerful AI systems.

Congress has already confronted one piece of the federal-state divide over artificial intelligence.

Last year, the Senate voted 99-1 to strip a provision aimed at deterring states from regulating AI from a federal spending and tax bill. First proposed as a 10-year ban, it was later tied to federal funding for states.

Advocates for a national approach had argued that differing state laws could hamper innovation and weaken U.S. competition with China. Its removal left states free to pursue their own rules while Congress continued debating federal oversight.

Few states have as much at stake in AI’s physical infrastructure as Virginia, home to the world’s largest concentration of data centers.

The facilities require enormous amounts of electricity and other resources, and proposals for new development have fueled disputes over utility costs, environmental effects and how much information the public receives before projects are approved.

Spanberger moved on that front last week, announcing a data center accountability framework that includes proposed changes to environmental oversight, public disclosure and how industry costs are allocated.

She also signed Executive Order 22 creating an AI task force to examine workforce displacement, data privacy and cybersecurity. Those actions fall within the state’s authority but do not provide the national standards that Spanberger is asking Congress to consider.

“In the absence of federal action, states are leading within their more limited areas of jurisdiction,” Spanberger wrote. However, her letter did not give a timetable for its recommendations or identify specific federal requirements she wants lawmakers to adopt.

Spanberger isn’t the only Virginia official pressing Washington to act.

andria, co-chair of Congress' bipartisan Caucus on Artificial Intelligence, led a bipartisan group of 10 House members in a letter last week urging Johnson and Jeffries to advance legislation on AI oversight, security and transparency.

Citing recent incidents involving advanced AI systems, the lawmakers warned that future failures could threaten critical infrastructure and financial institutions.

"The Congress may not receive another warning shot," they wrote.

Some of the warnings about AI have come from the industry itself, although developers and researchers disagree over the severity of the risks and how governments should respond.

Anthropic has published accounts of attempts to misuse its models and steps the company took to counter them.

The company has also recently revealed that its Claude model is helping researchers develop its successor under human supervision, adding another dimension to the debate over how rapidly AI capabilities are advancing and what developers should be required to disclose.

But Americans are increasingly skeptical that AI companies can handle those questions on their own, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll released Tuesday.

According to the survey, 73% of respondents said that AI companies had not done enough to prevent serious societal harm. Most also said federal officials should have a major role in setting safety standards.

The poll also captured the tension surrounding the technology, with 55% saying that slowing AI development would be a good thing, compared with 13% who said it would be bad. The remainder were unsure or did not answer.

At the same time, AI continues to attract enormous investment and has been promoted as a tool that could boost productivity and accelerate scientific research. Its longer-term effects on employment remain uncertain.

In her letter, Spanberger did not ask Congress to halt that development. She instead argues that lawmakers should play a larger role in determining the rules under which it proceeds.

"Our country cannot afford for the federal government to abdicate its oversight responsibility," she wrote. "Congress must immediately and seriously consider how to best grapple with how AI's emergence creates opportunities and challenges for our safety, well-being, and collective future."

Vote NO

on Redefining Marriage in Virginia's Constitution

AMENDMENT 2 WILL

- Repeal the 2006 constitutional amendment defining marriage as only between 1 man and 1 woman
- Eliminate all religious freedom protection
- Subject to legal consequence anyone "discriminating" against, or "treating differently," same-sex marriage
- Add to the Constitution a new category for "gender" (separate from "sex"), which threatens biological girls' and women's sports and private spaces.
- Eliminate sole recognition of man and woman as spouses; more children will be deprived of a mom or dad via IVF/surrogacy

UNDER CURRENT VIRGINIA LAW

Virginia's constitution recognizes marriage between one man and one woman.

Since the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Obergefell v. Hodges, marriages between people of the same sex have been recognized in our Commonwealth.

This amendment will not change the status of any legally married couple.

Fluvanna voters to decide on 1% school construction sales tax

FLUVANNA REVIEW STAFF

Virginia’s Commission on School Construction and Modernization met Sept. 8 for the first time since 2022, as voters in 47 counties and cities, including Fluvanna, prepare to decide whether to authorize an additional sales tax of up to one percent for school construction and major renovations.

Fluvanna estimates the tax could generate about $2.6 million annually. The General Assembly made the option available statewide earlier this year. If voters approve the referendum Nov. 3, the Board of Supervisors would still have to adopt an ordinance before collecting the tax.

Representatives of the Virginia Association of Counties (VACo) and Virginia Municipal League told the commission that the number of referendums reflects broad demand for another way to finance school buildings. Localities have traditionally relied heavily on residential property taxes for those projects.

The Virginia Department of Education reported that 1,064 public school buildings statewide are at least 51 years old, about 55 percent of the total.

Fluvanna’s schools are generally newer, but a building’s construction date does not tell the whole story. Roofs, heating and cooling systems, plumbing and other infrastructure may require major work well before a building reaches that age.

The Virginia Department of Taxation estimates that the additional tax could generate more than $400 million annually if voters in all 47 localities approve it and their governing bodies implement it. Food and essential personal hygiene products, including diapers, would be exempt.

Revenue could fund new school construction, major renovations, and related bond or loan financing costs. It could not pay ordinary operating expenses or repay existing debt for projects begun before the tax takes effect.

The tax would expire no later than 20 years after the county’s approval of the resolution calling for the referendum.
